Denfeld 'Mystery' Causes New Storm In Senate

Officer Given Commission Irregularly, Letter Says

Matthews Arouses Renewed Criticisms By Explanation of Admiral's Removal

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

An official Navy explanation and counter charges by Republican critics touched off another stormy Senate session yesterday over the "mystery of the Denfeld commission."

Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews wrote Chairman Millard Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee saying it was true that Admiral Louis Denfeld's commission for a second term as Chief of Naval Operations was delivered to him, but said it was handed to him "irregularly" and thus never was legally "issued."

He said he never knew Denfeld had the certificate until Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wisc.) disclosed it last week on the Senate floor. McCarthy, recalling Matthews' testimony before the Senate Committee that Denfeld's commission "never was issued to him," called the Navy Secretary "either untruthful or incompetent."

Tydings Defends Matthews

Tydings stanchly defended Matthews, and declared that the entire case was a "sham battle" raised by Republicans to make political capital.

He pitched into McCarthy for ignoring what he called Matthews' honest explanation, and carrying on a "pursuit of littleness."

The Marylander declared that the whole controversy was meaningless, for regardless of the circumstances surrounding issuance of the commission, the President, as Commander in Chief, could legally remove Denfeld.

Republican Senators did not challenge this but centered their fire on Matthews.

Naval Aide Delivered It

In his letter, Matthews said he learned January 19 that President Truman's naval aide, Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, had delivered the commission to Denfeld on September 14. He had signed the certificate earlier, but had always supposed that it remained unsigned at the White House, the Secretary said.

This was before Denfeld's break with top Department of Defense officials, and his testimony that they were hamstringing the Navy.

The Navy Secretary declared that this presentation of the much-questioned commission did not constitute "official delivery." The certificate should have been delivered to him for the official seal to be added and given to Denfeld only when sworn in, he said.

After Tydings read Matthews'

U. S. Revealed Ready With Airlift Plans In 'Little Blockade'

High Commissioner's Picture of Conditions Is Moderately Hopeful

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Berlin, Jan. 23 (U.P.)—Plans to remobilize the Berlin airlift were revealed today as the Russians put in force a "little blockade" of the city, cutting truck traffic to a trickle and delaying a U. S. Army train for several hours.

U. S. officials said the Russians employed the same harassing tactics—minute inspection of travel documents—that preceded the land and water blockade of Berlin in 1948.

At Frankfurt, reliable sources disclosed that a plan to reactivate the airlift had been ready in the office of the American High Commission for months—"just in case."

The Russians began to slow traffic shortly before Sunday midnight, just one day after Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, United States commandant in Berlin, backed down in a dispute with the Soviets over an abandoned building.

Maj. Gen. Geoffrey K. Bourne, Berlin's British commandant, described the transport slowdown as "pinpricks" and said he did not believe it was serious.

The vehicles stopped were German trucks and one United States Army passenger train. No United States Army vehicles were hindered and British trains and vehicles were not bothered.

British officials said 104 German trucks, loaded with food and other necessities for Berlin, were piled up at Helmstedt by nightfall, waiting for clearance.

The Army train from Frankfurt, whose passengers included Col. James Duke, commander of American troops in Berlin, was halted at Marienborn, Russian checkpoint a half mile from the British-Russian border, from 11:30 Sunday night to 6:30 a. m.

McCloy, just back from his post in Germany, gave reporters a moderately hopeful picture of conditions there after meeting yesterday with President Truman, Secretary Acheson and high State Department officials.

"One cannot minimize the danger of nationalist influence considering Germany's past record," McCloy told questioners. "Embers are always dangerous, especially when there is inflammable material around.

"But, generally speaking, the people of Western Germany are not disposed to any revival of national socialism or to further military adventures. I don't think the inci-

Osborn Resigns, Views A-Control Prospects Dimly

Lake Success, Jan. 23 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, resigning as United States deputy on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, tonight said control of the atom will come after the Kremlin decides to cooperate with the world.

Osborn's resignation, handed in several days ago, was announced by President Truman. It is effective January 31.

Osborn said here he would do scientific research, study populations of the world and keep his hand in the atomic problem as an adviser and consultant to the United States delegation.

President Truman said John C. Ross, U. S. deputy on the Security Council, would serve as acting deputy on the Atomic Commission.

Two Shots Fired At Prosecutor In Slaying Trial

Belton, Tex., Jan. 23 (AP).—James K. Evetts, prosecuting attorney in the murder trial of Sam Smithwick, dodged two bullets, fired at him from ambush tonight.

Smithwick is charged with the gun slaying of W. H. (Bill) Mason, crusading radio commentator.

Evetts drove into his garage about 8:15 p. m. after long hours in the courtroom today. As he started to leave the garage, he glimpsed a figure in the shadows.

The district attorney ducked back into the garage as a gun blazed twice. One shot creased the trunk of his car. The second buried itself in the garage wall.

Footprints indicated the gunman had waited some time for Evetts to come home.

Mason was shot to death July 29 in Alice, Tex. He had criticized Smithwick on a broadcast.

Premature Baby Dies, Police Seek Mother

Homicide squad detectives and members of the Police Women's Bureau were trying yesterday to locate a 35-year-old mother to notify her of the death of her infant, born prematurely at Sibley Hospital on December 15.

The woman was listed then as Mrs. Edna Seal, and also as Mrs. Edna Bonich. The infant was in an incubator until death occurred Sunday. The mother, who left the hospital four days after the birth, gave a Washington address, but police now believe she lives near Richmond, Va.

Withdraw After 'Victory'

Indonesia's Third City Invaded By Army Led by Dutch Rebel

Jakarta (Tuesday), Jan. 24 (AP).—A private guerilla army attacking the five-weeks-old United States of Indonesia left Bandoeng suddenly yesterday afternoon after having taken over most of the town for a few hours earlier.

Dutch troops regularly garrisoned in Bandoeng, third largest city in the U. S. I., patrolled the streets today looking for deserters from their forces.

The guerilla army is led by an outlaw former Dutch officer, Capt. R. P. P. (Turk) Westerling. The sudden withdrawal of the guerillas surprised U. S. I. officials as much as the original action against the city.

Westerling's troops, calling themselves the "Forces of the Queen of Justice," include tough Dutch-trained Indonesian airborne units (red caps) and commandos (green caps) who deserted from the Dutch army.

They began their action early yesterday when they captured the town of Tjimahi, in the mountains of west Java.

After hard fighting the force of about 600 invaded Bandoeng, capital of west Java and chief concentration point for Dutch troops, 120 miles southwest of Jakarta. They swarmed by foot and truck through the southern half of the city, occupying the main business section and the headquarters of the Indonesian army, in a 10-minute battle.

Westerling's force was said to include dissidents from the fanatical Moslem Daru Islam movement of west Java and followers of the late Trotskyite Communist, Tan Malakka, who was executed by the Indonesians last year.

Bill Would Apply Trust Act to Unions

Sen. Robertson's Measure Aimed At 3-Day Week In Coal Dispute

By The Associated Press

Senator Robertson (D., Va.) yesterday denounced John L. Lewis for curtailing coal production and introduced a bill that would make labor unions subject to prosecution under the antitrust laws in certain cases.

Robertson indicated he feels the bill would outlaw the current three-day work week in soft coal mines.

The Virginian, who led a Senate investigation of the curtailed work week last year, accused Lewis of imposing it to exercise arbitrary dominion over the coal industry and to enhance his personal vanity.

A court hearing, originally set for Thursday, on a Government plea for an injunction to end the short work week was postponed yesterday until February 1. The Federal District Court granted the delay at the joint request of Lewis' United Mine Workers and Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

Aides said Denham took about three weeks to prepare the injunction request he filed last week, and that he thinks the union is entitled to more time to prepare for the hearing.

Meanwhile Lewis turned down a Senate Labor Committee invitation to testify on a resolution asking that President Truman invoke the Taft-Hartley law to restore full coal production. The committee had invited Lewis to give his views at a public hearing Wednesday.

Under Senator Robertson's bill, the antitrust laws would apply to unions in cases where:

1. A union acted in "unreasonable" restraint of trade.

2. The union's action affected an industry essential to the national economy, health or safety.

In a Senate speech, Robertson said Congress always intended that labor unions should be covered by the antitrust laws, but that the Supreme Court held otherwise in a 1941 case dealing with the AFL carpenters' union. He said his bill would overrule that decision.

63,000 Miners Scorn Back-to-Work Pleas

Pittsburgh, Jan. 23 (AP).—About 63,000 angry coal miners today turned their backs on union return-to-work pleas and pushed their "no contract, no work" strike into its fourth week.

Nearly 26,500 other soft coal diggers re-entered the pits.

Many locals of the United Mine Workers voted over the weekend to resume production for a fuel-hungry Nation but were unable to work when pickets showed up.

District UMW officials strove for a complete work return.

Miners on strike have expressed resentment over their lack of a contract and say they'd rather stay out entirely than work only three days a week currently allowed by the UMW.

But their loss of income is beginning to hurt.

Citizens Hit Slow Action By District

Full Speed Urged On Schools, Buildings And Libraries at Hearing on Budget

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Slow-motion operations of District government came under fire of citizens yesterday in the finale of House hearings on the Commissioners' proposed 119-million-dollar municipal budget for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, Negro counterpart of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said "our schools have been the victims of some neglect—we've been waiting 20 years on Spingarn (new high school at 24th and Benning ne.)—there ought not to be this feebleness on the part of our government."

G. E. McLaughlin of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association said his community's problem is to get the branch library started at Connecticut ave. and Newark st. nw., on the site for which residents of the area put up some $30,000 back in 1935.

At a Loss to Explain

McLaughlin said the Commissioners' twice budgeted the building money, and Congress cut it out; this year the Commissioners' refused it. "As one who helped raise the $30,000 from the citizens, I'm at a loss to explain . . ." he said. "We thought the library would be for our children. Maybe we've been talking about a library for our grandchildren."

From Northeast and Southeast Washington, the final hearing drew numerous representatives of civic, parent, business and neighborhood groups, to urge a full-speed-ahead program to construct needed schools, library and recreation facilities.

Washington building groups sent spokesmen to protest slowness in the issuing of building permits here, and to urge approval of funds to hire additional personnel for the permit bureau. The spokesmen were C. W. Humphreys, of the Washington Building Congress; Grosvenor Chapman, of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Architects; and Randall C. Wyant of the Master Builders Association of Washington.

Two Months for Permit

"We feel the building department is doing everything with its limited personnel to render good service," said Humphreys. "It takes a couple of months to get a building permit. The architects and builders of Washington feel they are entitled to better service. Studies made by the Building Congress show no other large city requires as long to process building permits."

Subcommittee Chairman Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) said the five-member group may meet later this week to make its draft of the budget bill.

Bates said he felt his group was impressed with the school needs of the entire District. Other members, while declining to predict whether the subcommittee would push the Commissioners' budget

A group of Southeast residents last night called on Superintendent Hobart S. Corning to recommend to the Board of Education the appointment of John Koontz as principal of the Sousa Junior High School.

A resolution indorsing Koontz was approved at a spirited meeting at which it was charged the gathering was part of a "political campaign" to have Koontz approved for the post.

The school board last week in considering an appointment of a principal failed by a 5-to-3 vote to approve Dr. Corning's choice of Miss Eleanor P. McAuliffe, now assistant principal of Paul Junior High.

Truman Urges Billion Tax Income Increase; House By-Passes FEPC

Alaska and Hawaii Statehood Bills Given Preference Over Rights Measure

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Administration leaders three times by-passed House consideration of FEPC legislation yesterday, the first opportunity to call up the key civil rights measure under the reinvigorated House "discharge" rule.

Amid bitter partisan recriminations, Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas gave Alaska and Hawaii statehood bills right of way over the Truman-indorsed fair employment practices measure.

A third opportunity to call up the FEPC bill passed into limbo when Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) moved adjournment right after the House voted to consider statehood for both Alaska and Hawaii.

McCormack's motion to adjourn was sharply contested by progressive Republicans and some liberal Democrats. Rayburn recognized Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) to demand a teller vote on the adjournment move.

On the teller count, the House voted 167 to 109 with McCormack to quit for the day, with Republican leaders joining Democratic leaders in support of the motion. A number of Northern Democrats, who have been pressing for FEPC action, went along with the move.

Thus ended the first "discharge day" under the so-called 21-day rule since the House last Friday refused to restore the Rules Committee's old powers to pigeonhole legislation.

Blocked on this first try, bipartisan House civil rights forces added what they called "two other strings to their bow":

1. Representative Franklin Roosevelt (Dem.-Lib., N. Y.), introduced a petition to force the FEPC bill to a House vote. The petition requires 218 signatures to assure House action. Roosevelt announced that 75 House members signed it yesterday. He said his goal is 218 signatures by February 1 and House action on the next "discharge day," February 13, the day following Lincoln's birthday.

2. House Rules Chairman Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.) said he will move in the Rules Committee today to force a vote on reporting the FEPC bill directly to the floor. House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), whose civil rights measure is still blocked in the rules group, called on Republican leaders to "instruct" the four

Million in Cash Left by 'Jimmy' Removed to Bank

The estate of the late Jimmy LaFontaine, undisputed king of the Washington gamblers for a generation, contained more than one million dollars in cash alone.

Existence of the money was confirmed late last night by Charles E. Ford, close friend and executor of the LaFontaine will.

Ford said he took the cash Friday morning to the Lincoln National Bank.

When the will was filed in District Court on November 31, his estate was valued at "more than one million dollars."

LaFontaine died at 81, November 21, in Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore.

Price Spread On Eggs Hit At Hearings

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Housewives in Washington and other cities are paying too much for eggs, even at prices that are now 20 to 30 cents a dozen below last fall's high, a Senate Agriculture subcommittee was told yesterday.

Representative James I. Dolliver (R., Iowa) said Midwest formers are getting 20 cents and less for eggs. "Farmers are confronted with a fearful dilemma," he said, "with falling farm prices and with things they buy staying up." He warned that the situation threatens the Nation's economy.

Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) majority leader on the Senate committee, confirmed Dolliver's statement. He said New England farmers were getting about 23 cents for eggs that sell at retail for about 65 cents.

(Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan last week warned the Senate Appropriations Committee that "farm prices are now unfairly low." His testimony, released yesterday, said that farm prices have

FCC Upheld In Denying Radio Permits

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The United States Court of Appeals ruled here yesterday that "monopoly in the mass communication of news and advertising is contrary to the public interest, even if not in terms proscribed by the antitrust laws.

The case involved denial by the Federal Communications Commission of radio station licenses to two Ohio newspapers, the Mansfield Journal and the Lorain Journal, both owned by the same firm.

FCC rejected the applications a year and a half ago, ruling the Mansfield paper had coerced advertisers into exclusive advertising contracts with the paper, shutting out a local radio station, separately owned and the only other news medium in town.

FCC said what had happened in Mansfield "was indicative of what might occur under similar circumstances in Lorain."

The case was complicated by the fact that the Justice Department has since filed a civil action against the Lorain Journal on charges of conspiring to monopolize the spread of news, advertising and other information. That case has not yet come to trial.

The papers claimed the FCC ruling was, in effect, an attempt to enforce the antitrust laws, a justice and not an FCC function. To this the appellate court yesterday replied that whether or not the Mansfield activities amounted to a violation of law was not being determined in this case but the activities nonetheless "may impair Mansfield's ability to serve the public."

Then the court declared monopoly in the communication of news and advertising is not in the public interest, even if that monopoly is not an antitrust violation. The opinion was written by Judge George T. Washington and concurred in by Judges Wilbur K. Miller and David L. Baselon. It was Washington's first major

Wants Reductions In Wartime Excises, Higher Estate, Gift And Profits Levies

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to enact a tax program that would:

1. Bring in about one billion dollars a year additional revenue, from higher estate and gift taxes, and higher rates on corporation profits.

2. Reduce many of the wartime excise taxes, but only to the extent that the resultant loss of revenue is made up by plugging existing tax loopholes.

The President's recommendations came in a special tax message sent to Congress. It followed an outline that had been generally anticipated, and which had been foreshadowed in Mr. Truman's earlier messages.

Budget Balance Delayed

In yesterday's document, as in the messages sent to Congress earlier this month, Mr. Truman indicated it would be unwise, if not impossible, to try balancing the budget by higher taxes in the coming fiscal year. The object desired, rather, is to eliminate some inequities, make a modest increase in revenue, and lead toward a balanced budget in later years.

At three separate places in his message, Mr. Truman made it clear that he "could not approve" reduction of excise taxes unless it were offset by equivalent increases from cementing loopholes in other kinds of taxes.

"We cannot afford to reduce excise taxes first," he said, "in the hope that action will be taken later to make up for the loss in revenue." The implication was that he was insisting on both actions in a single bill.

On the assumption that there would be concurrent, and offsetting action, the President proposed reductions in the following categories of excises:

1. Transportation of property. The current excise tax is 3 percent of the freight cost.

2. Transportation of persons. The present tax is 15 percent of the bus, rail, ship or air ticket cost.

3. Long-distance telephone and telegraph communications. The tax is 25 percent of the charge.

4. "The entire group of retail excises," which amount to a 20 percent tax added to the retail purchase price of furs, jewelry (including costume jewelry), toilet preparations, such as cosmetics and perfumes, and luggage, including men's wallets and women's handbags.

Yield Estimated

These taxes are estimated to yield about $1,326,000,000 a year. It is argued that their elimination would not result in a total loss

Jamming of Dial Phones Is Planned To Assist Strike

A CIO union threatening a Nationwide telephone strike disclosed yesterday a novel plan to jam dial systems and make the strike effective.

The idea is to have the public and fellow union members flood Bell Telephone Co. switchboards with calls, should the strike start, in the hope that automatic equipment will break down.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of the Communications Workers of Ameica (CWA), outlined the strategy in a letter to CIO President Philip Murray. Beirne told Murray that Bell phone companies are balking at CWA's wage-pension demands and said a big strike seems inevitable.

C. H. Johnson, vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., said Beirne's statement "clearly indicates that the union leadership utterly disregards its responsibility for maintaining a service so vital to the public health and safety."

He said the company will, "as in the past, bargain in good faith with the local unions."

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, meanwhile stepped into the dispute.

'Snags' Trial Nears End

3 Numbers Slips Identified As Government Rests Case

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The Government yesterday rested its gambling case against William (Snags) Lewis and two others, described as "tentacles" in a 14-million-[illegible]-a-year gambling syndicate.

Defense attorneys indicated they will present no witnesses, and the case is expected to go to the jury of seven men and five women after final arguments today or early Wednesday.

Key Government witnesses yesterday, as the trial moved into its third week, was an admitted numbers player who testified that three numbers slips seized March 25 at Lewis' headquarters were records of his bets.

James Theodore (Single Action) Trice was the fifth admitted numbers writer or player to testify against the defendants.

Lewis, Attilio Acalotti, the self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle" and Frank Billeci, a circulation man for the Washington Times-Herald at the time of his arrest, are being tried in District Court for operating a numbers lottery.

Trice testified yesterday he saw Billeci pick up numbers play in the kitchen of Wearley's Restaurant, 418 12th st. nw., "four or five times."

He said he played the numbers with "John Barnes," a Wearley's cook, and Billeci picked up the play from Barnes.

New Charge Is Made On A-Metal to Soviet

On Congo Ore

Three-Power Atom Talks Open Jan. 30

Representatives of the United States, Britain and Belgium will meet here January 30 to discuss atomic energy problems—presumably Congo uranium—it was announced yesterday.

The announcement said only that matters of "mutual interest" in the atomic field would be taken up. But it was clear that the topic of common concern is the production of atomic ore in Belgium's African colony.

Announcement of the meeting gave rise to rumors that present arrangements under which the Congo ore is allocated were in dispute.

However, it was learned yesterday that this is not the case. Britain is reportedly content to have all of the ore continue to come to the United States for the next few years, as has been the case for the past year or more.

The purpose of the talks, then, appeared to be to make sure that Belgium was satisfied with proposed future arrangements and to prevent both the substance and shadow of a high-handed attitude by the United Kingdom and the United States toward Belgium.

From time to time, Communists in Belgium have sought to embarrass the government with allegations that it has been pushed around with respect to its uranium ore by the two larger countries, and allowed no voice in the allocations.

Yugoslav Election Set

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—The presidium, at a special session last night attended by Marshal Tito, set March 26 as the date for the general election. It will be the first since 1945 when the Communist-dominated People's Front formalized its control of the country.

By The Associated Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee produced a hint and then a positive statement yesterday that a hitherto undisclosed shipment of 45 pounds of uranium metal went to Russia in 1944.

Burman

That would be uranium shipment No. 4 on the committee's scorecard.

In addition, the committee said the Soviets got 100 grams of heavy water, which also was useful for atom bomb experiments.

And there was testimony that Britain, like Russia, a wartime ally, also got a little uranium.

Committee Counsel Frank Tavenner supplied both the hint and then the statement "we will prove another shipment" of 45 pounds of uranium metal to Russia in June, 1944.

The statement was to reporters. The hint came earlier when Tavenner asked witness Lawrence C. Burman whether he knew of the 45-pound shipment.

"No, sir," Burman replied.

Burman now is director of the licensing division of the Atomic Energy Commissino. From 1942 to 1946 he was in charge of obtaining special materials for the Manhattan engineering district, which produced the atom bomb. The special materials included uranium.

Burman testified that one shipment went through in 1943 after "we thought we had the Canadian supply shut off."

Burman said it wasn't until 1948 that he learned of a 100-pound shipment. It was sent from Canadian mines and went through, he said, despite the fact that "we thought we had the Canadian supply shut off."

Burman said the Russians also got a previous shipment of 420 pounds of compounds and a later one of 2.2 pounds of uranium metal, both with Government approval.

For the most part, the committee retraced with Burman old ground previously covered in testimony by its own investigators and by Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, retired, who ran the atomic project during the war.

Later the committee expects to question Groves again and to give former Vice President Henry A. Wallace a chance to testify. Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis has accused Wallace of applying pressure to get uranium for Russia. Wallace has called this "sheerest fabrication."

Groves denied Wallace ever applied pressure to him. And Burman testified yesterday that nobody in the Government put any on him.

Vinson Opposes Plan to Give President Draft Call Power

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee yesterday declared that Congress should keep "exclusive power" over putting the draft into effect in any extension of Selective service on a standby basis.

The Georgian indicated he would go along with keeping draft machinery in existence—with registration and classification of young men continuing. But he flatly opposed suggestions of defense chiefs that the President be authorized to order inductions if an emergency arises when Congress is not in session.

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray suggested the latter compromise yesterday, as did Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson last week. Johnson said he would talk to President Truman about a compromise bill and report back to the committee on Wednesday.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Generals Omar Bradley and J. Lawton Collins are scheduled to appear in support of the legislation then. The present draft authority, which hasn't been used in the past year, will expire in June.

Gray emphasized in his testimony yesterday that the Army s not asking for continuation of the law "to maintain the current Army in being."

"We are asking the Congress to retain Selective Service legislation primarily because it is a vital element in mobilization," he added.

Angus Ward Back; Doubts 'Tito Split' Is Likely in China

Angus Ward, former United States Consul General at Mukden, said yesterday, after a conference with President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson, that he found no evidence of a "Tito split" between the Chinese Communists and Russia.

He discounted speculation that Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-tung might break with Moscow in the fashion of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

Ward returned to this country recently after being detained by the Communists in the Mukden Consulate, tried on charges of beating a Chinese employe, and deported.

Baruch Urges 3-Point Preparedness Program

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Bernard M. Baruch today advocated a three-point preparedness program as 'the surest deterrent against another war."

Writing in the February issue of the Reader's Digest, Baruch called for legal enactment of a complete "stand-by mobilization plan," the formation of a permanent mobilization agency and a constant inventory of national resources in relations to the needs of a possible war.

GOP Senators Named To Help Draft Policy

Senate Republicans yesterday chose two New England and two Midwestern Senators to work with GOP House members in drafting a party policy declaration for the 1950 congressional election campaign.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) announced after a meeting of the 15-man committee appointed to prepare a policy statement, that he had named Senators Owen Brewster (Me.), Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) and Henry Cabot Lodge (Mass.) to the group. Taft will serve as ex-officio member.

Senators Debate Amendment for Rights to Women

By the United Press

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday a proposed constitutional amendment guaranteeing equal rights for women could lead to "vast confusion" and possibly make rape no longer a crime.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) said the amendment should be adopted even though it means that "women must give up all their feminine privileges."

They debated the issue as the Senate took up a resolution sponsored by 30 Senators to refer the equal rights amendment to the States for possible ratification.

Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), one of the sponsors, said Congress has been talking for 27 years about equal rights for women, "and it is high time the people were allowed to vote on it."

President Sees Aides on U. S. Arms Progress

President Truman met yesterday with military leaders and Cabinet officers to discuss America's progress in the field of war weapons.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross reported that the hour-long conference was "entirely confidential." In response to questions, he said it was not the result of any spectacular or new development in the military field.

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray said that the hydrogen bomb, a weapon vastly more powerful than the atomic bomb, was not discussed.

Ross said that the meeting yesterday was the third of its kind at the White House, and was simply for the purpose of keeping Mr. Truman posted on the evaluation of weapons. He said there would be another such meeting, probably in about 90 days.

He said that brief talks made by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and General Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Most of the talking, he added, was done by Lieut. Gen. John E. Hull, head of the inter-service Weapons Evaluation Board.

Others present were Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, Postmaster General Donaldson, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, Secretary of Labor Tobin, Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews, Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington, General J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army; Admiral Forrest Sherman, chief of staff of the Navy, and General Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force.

McInerney Approved

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday unanimously approved the nomination of James Michael McInerney of New York to be an Assistant United States Attorney General.

Mo's Skipper Cites Chain of 'Unusual' Events

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—The captain of the battleship Missouri today said she ran aground "through a chain of unusual and unfortunate circumstances."

"I cannot go into detail," Capt. William D. Brown told reporters in his cabin aboard the mired Missouri, "as to do so would be to usurp the prerogative of the court of inquiry which has been appointed."

The Missouri is the first capital ship the 47-year-old officer has commanded. He became her skipper last December 10. His home is at Frostproof, Fla.

Also declining to make statements on the "Mo's" grounding on a Chesapeake Bay shoal near Old Point Comfort last Tuesday were the navigator, Lieut. Comdr. Frank G. Morris, New York City, and the officer of the deck, Lieut. E. D. Arnold, Long Beach, Calif.

Earlier today, Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, confirem previously published reports that the Missouri was trying to traverse an acoustic range paralleling the main ship channel when she struck the shoal.

The range was installed January 13 to test electronic devices placed on the bottom of the bay to record the presence of passing ships.

Blandy said the Navy Bureau of Ordnance had made a standing request that naval vessels entering or leaving Hampton Roads run the acoustic range. The request was optional with each skipper.

Captain Brown said he was optimistic about chances of freeing the battleship on the next attempt scheduled for February 2. Earlier today, the same optimism had been expressed by Rear Admiral Allen E. Smith, commander of Atlantic Fleet cruisers, who is in charge of the salvage operation.

Brown said he had "been in and out of Hampton Roads several times" when he commanded the destroyer-transport Gregory and the destroyer Nicholes. He added, however, that he has had "very little East Coast sea duty."

He said the inspection of the Missouri after she is drydocked should not require more than 72 hours and that "everything points to the Missouri's being able to participate in Portrex," the joint airborne-amphibious Puerto Rican exercises to be held in February and March.

New Premier Of Bulgaria Dies at 72

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
VASSIL P. KOLAROV
. . . In office since July

Sofia, Jan. 23 (AP).—Premier Vassil P. Kolarov, 72-year-old life-long friend and coworker of late Premier Georgi Dimitrov, died today after a long illness.

(There had been no previous announcement of his illness. Official Sofia news broadcasts heard in London said Kolarov suffered a heart attack in January.)

The son of a shoemaker, Kolarov held many important national and international posts during his life, among them secretary of the Comintern (Communist International) in 1922. A year later, with Dimitrov, he led an unsuccessful revolt against the Tsankov regime in Bulgaria.

Kolarov and Dimitrov fled from the former Bulgarian monarchy and went to Moscow.

Kolarov came back to Bulgaria when the Soviet army entered the country in 1945.

He led the provisional government's delegation to peace treaty talks with the Allies in Paris in the summer of 1946 and became Bulgaria's first president later that year, when the monarchy was voted out in a plebiscite.

(Speculation abroad centers on Vice Premier Vulko Chervenkov, Communist Party secretary, as Kolarov's successor.)

Warsaw, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Communist government of Poland has taken control of Caritas, chief charitable organization of the Roman Catholic Church in this country, and has jailed a Catholic priest on a charge of manipulating its funds, the Polish Press Agency said today.

The announcement said investigation by a government audit board had disclosed "fraudulent abuses with diversion of funds for political purposes," adding that those responsible would be brought to trial.

It named three directors of Caritas in the Wroclaw Diocesan office as guilty of criminal acts. These three were identified by the agency as the Rev. Antoni Samulski, who has been jailed; Jan Paszenda and a Marian Pirozynski, who is accused of dealing in paper stolen from the Communist Party publishing cooperative.

Caritas operates orphanages and other institutions and had obtained some of its supplies from "American relief to Poland" and American Catholics.

Three ministries—Education and Public Administration, Labor, and Social Welfare—have named trustees for Caritas and will choose laymen as well as priests for its future work, the agency said.

(In Washington, the National Catholic Welfare Conference said Caritas is a distributing agency for the War Relief Services of New York, a branch of the NCWC.)

Navy 'Mystery' Stirs Senators

letter on the floor yesterday, McCarthy attacked him anew. He quoted from a telegram from Denfeld, stating that Matthews did know he had received the commission, as he had thanked the Secretary for it.

The Wisconsin Senator repeated his charge that Matthews was either "deliberately untruthful or grossly incompetent."

In refutation of Matthews' statement that for legal issuance the commission should have been returned to him for the seal to be attached, he unrolled what he said was the original commission and pointed to a Navy seal on it.

Want Matthews Recalled

GOP colleagues promptly backed McCarthy's demand that Matthews should be called before the committee for an explanation in person. Tydings refused to agree to a special inquiry, but declared the members would have a chance to quiz the Navy Secretary when all Department of Defense chiefs are called later for general testimony on security matters.

"I don't want to dignify what I consider a comedy of errors with a full scale investigation," the Marylander declared. "I consider this an honest explanation."

Matthews' lengthy letter of explanation was bolstered with an opinion by the Navy Judge Advocate, Rear Admiral G. L. Russell, holding that Denfeld was "legally removed" as CNO November 1, and that receipt of a new commission did not restore him to the post.

Tydings again urged the Senators attacking Matthews to put aside the matter and vote on confirmation of Admiral Forrest P. Sherman as Denfeld's successor.

Consider Sherman Today

He said the Denfeld ouster, the hearings of last fall, and "having its biggest battleship stuck in the mud," have caused a "certain amount of demoralization" in the Navy. Sherman should be immediately confirmed to get 'things going again," the Senator added.

Before adjourning, the Senate agreed to take up Sherman's confirmation at noon today. Confirmation is expected before nightfall.

Denfeld's statement in his letter to McCarthy that "the Secretary knew I had the commission as I went in and thanked him for it," was squarely contradicted by Matthews.

Tydings offered the Senate a "probable answer" as to the conflict here. He suggested that Denfeld probably came in thanked his chief and that the latter, thinking he was talking about his recommendation and not the commission, acknowledged it.

Nazism Is No Serious Problem In Germany, McCloy Says Here

dents we read about are representative."

He said he had no evidence of any contact between Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and any group of officers resembling a general staff. And he thought the reported merger of extreme right-wing parties in the British zone was not "particularly important," since the groups involved held only five votes in the west German Parliament.

Although the High Commissioner described his visit here as "routine," he mentioned at least two subjects he hoped to discuss during his week at home.

One, he said, was lifting the barriers to greater foreign investment in Germany, possibly by means of a an agreed delay in settling old German debts of the interwar years. On this, he said, he was not recommending any particular plan, and could not speak for the British and French high commissioners.

The other subject was "some of the problems involved" in ending the legal state of war with Germany. But he said flatly he had no plans for modifying the occupation statute under which the Western Allies now control their combined zones.

"The extent to which it is to be modified—or whether it is to be modified at all—must await further evidence of the capacity of the western Germans to govern," he declared.

Baffled by New Red Tactics

He thought Chancellor Adenauer was not guilty of having started the present dispute with France over proposed long-term leases of coal mines in the Saar Valley. In McCloy's opinion, Adenauer was "sincerely anxious" to develop French-German understanding, and both Germans and French would be "wise enough" not to prejudice German-French relations or German membership in the western European community of nations.

McCloy confessed he was baffled by the revival of Soviet blockade tactics in Berlin in the last few days.

"I don't know what's in the Russian mind, or why they are going through this particular arm-twisting procedure," he said.

He knew in advance of the "general plan" to take vacant office space in Berlin, but, he said, the American commanders there acted on their own initiative in seizing the elevated railway building and then restoring it to the Russians.

On economic subjects, McCloy said the swift increase in German imports was causing him "considerable concern," and might compel a reimposition of import controls. He thought conditions were better in western Germany than in the eastern zone, even though production had not risen above the 1936-1938 level, the population was 10 million greater than prewar, unemployment was rising, and a thousand refugees a day were crossing from the Soviet-controlled areas.

Prasad, Follower Of Gandhi, Named India's President

New Delhi, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—Dr. Rajendra Prasad, 65, veteran follower of the late Mohandas K. Gandhi, today was elected first president of the new Indian republic.

Prasad, a longtime Congress Party leader, was elected without opposition by the Constituent Assembly.

The soft-spoken, scholarly president-elect will take his oath Thursday, when India officially becomes an American-style democracy with a constitution patterned after that of the United States.

Prasad was imprisoned from 1942 to 1945 because of his anti-British record and served three previous jail terms for his role in Gandhi's civil disobedience movement against British rule.

Like Gandhi, Prasad is a vegetarian and eschews Western clothes.

22 Church Groups Ask 'Adequate' DP Law

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Twenty-two national protestant and eastern orthodox denomination leaders today urged the Senate to enact promptly an "adequate, satisfactory and workable" displaced persons bill.

In a joint petition sent to Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the church leaders said Senate approval of the House-approved measure, HR4567, "would go far toward removing the unjust features" of the present act.

Nationalist Ships Shell Invasion Port

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists announced today an effective naval bombardment of Chapu, only 45 miles southwest of Communist Shanghai.

They said Red ammunition dumps, defense works and other military establishments were blown up and set afire.

The attack was part of the continuing Nationalist air and sea campaign aimed at preventing Red invasion of the Chusan Islands, Formosa and other offshore Nationalist holdings.

The Nationalists announced their naval forces based on the Chusan Islands had been increased and Lieut. Gen. Mao Shan sent there to direct guerilla warfare against the Reds on the mainland.

Reds Reported Sending Troops to Indo-China

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—The Nationalist Central News Agency reported today that thousands of Red troops were moving southward to join Chinese Communist forces who are reported to have joined Communist-led Indo-Chinese guerillas in a battle against regular Indo-Chinese forces.

Central reported Sunday that 30,000 Chinese troops had joined a guerilla force attacking the Indo-Chinese towns of Caobang and Lansong. Today's dispatch said the Reds expected eventually to mass 200,000 troops in south China to reinforce the Indo-Chinese attack.

Neither report has been confirmed from any other source.

(The Communist radio, heard in Hongkong, reported today that Indo-Chinese Reds destroyed 25 airplanes and a large quantity of gasoline in a three-hour hit-and-run raid Saturday on Hanoi airport. The broadcast made no mention of Chinese Communists operating with the Indo-Chinese.)

Genocide Pact Ratification Urged on Hill

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Administration leaders, backed by church groups, urged Senate ratification of the International Convention on the Punishment of Genocide yesterday.

Without such ratification, several speakers told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, the convention probably will not become effective. Only seven nations have ratified so far—30 more are required. These will be obtained quickly, Attorney Shad Polier of the American Jewish Congress said, once this country agrees. Forty-three nations signed the draft.

The international agreement, which was drawn by a United Nations commission and twice given U. N. approval, defines genocide as "a denial of the right of existence of entire human groups, as homicide is the denial of the right to live of individual human beings."

Rusk Urges Ratification

Deputy Undersecretary of State Dean Rusk said ratification would help to mobilize the "spiritual and moral resources of mankind against the brutality of dictatorships."

Target of many witnesses, particularly lawyers headed by Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman and former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, was an attack upon the convention by a group of the American Bar Association. Patterson and Dana Convese Backus, vice chairman of the New York Bar Association, presented a resolution of the New York bar, disagreeing with the ABA group and urging Senate action.

The ABA objections were that the convention is unconstitutional, that it subjects American nationals to the jurisdiction of an international penal court, and that it limits free speech and free press.

Perlman said it is the Department of Justice view that this country has full authority to enter the compact. He described as unfounded contentions it would infringe upon the rights of states to deal with criminal offenses.

"The conjuring up of objections on constitutional grounds is no more than the parading of theories long since rejected," Perlman said.

Hits "Legalistic Arguments"

Patterson lashed out at what he called "legalistic arguments" of the ABA group. Patterson, one of the Nation's outstanding constitutional lawyers, said the objections have "no substance and cannot bear the light of analysis."

Another who bitterly attacked the ABA arguments was Mrs. Harper Sibley, president of the United Council of Church Women. Finishing an appeal for ratification, she said:

"My children asked me today who in this country was in favor of genocide. I told them just a few lawyers."

Mrs. Sibley told dramatically how she had witnessed in Frankfort tables loaded with jewelry, and gold teeth taken from victims of the Nazi concentration camp at Dachau. "The name, genocide, is not just a word written on a piece of paper," she said.

Clayton Fears Reds Will Ring Western Hemisphere by 1955

By The Associated Press

Former Undersecretary of State Will L. Clayton, yesterday said "Stalin is winning the cold war."

If it continues, the year of 1955 "will probably find the Western Hemisphere surrounded by Communism," he told the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"The Communists are awakening the masses, and make no mistake about it, the masses are listening."

Clayton spoke in urging Congress to adopt a resolution advocating a Federal union of the North Atlantic Treaty nations and other democratic countries.

He is a vice president of the Atlantic Union Committee, which is sponsoring a convention of Atlantic Treaty nations to federalize into an economic and political union within the framework of the United Nations Charter.

Saying that the democracies cannot continue to bear the defense burdens of cold war, Clayton declared the only solution is creation of an economic union because Communism's weapons are economic ones.

A single competitive economy, he said, "would make it impossible for Socialism to continue long."

Clayton said he had in mind the Socialistic Government of Great Britain. Through an economic union, he argued, free enterprise would flourish and production rise to new levels not now possible under Socialistic control.

'Hill' Applauds Plan to Reduce Excise Levies

House and Senate taxmakers yesterday generally approved President Truman's plan to reduce excise taxes and plug some tax loopholes, but took a dim view of his call for a billion-dollar over-all tax increase.

House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) predicted his committee would open hearings in a week or two and report out "its own bill in plenty of time for the Senate to act."

But he backed away from any comment on the President's proposal to hike corporate tax rates and estate and gift levies.

He outspokenly indorsed only the idea of applying any revenue saved from "plugging loopholes" to a reduction in war excises.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), whose Senate Finance Committee will have some say about it, promised only "study."

House and Senate Republicans accused the President of tardy acceptance of the GOP position that excise taxes are throttling business.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), called on Congress to "go ahead and repeal the wartime excise taxes immediately. He accused the President of threatening a veto "unless other taxes are raised in the manner he prescribes."

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) said the President wanted more taxes "to finance spendthrift socialism," and Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) flatly predicted Congress would not increase any tax rates this year.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), a leading exponent of a "single package tax bill," said he hoped the Ways and Means Committee would "review the whole tax structure" and get out a bill in time for the Senate to act.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) predicted Congress would approve "most of the suggestions.

Chairman Doughton said he thought his committee would take to the House floor, possibly later this week, one phase of the President's loophole-plugging—a stop-gap bill retroactively making up for "undertaxation" of life insurance companies.

A number of business groups meanwhile applauded separate phases of the President's message.

Walter P. Marshall, president of Western Union, called the 25 percent tax on telegraph users "a serious threat to the industry" and said it was "gratifying" the President singled it out for a cut.

President Asks Billion More Tax Income, Excise Reductions of this amount, since part would come back to the Government in other forms—more payments from corporate and private income levies, because of better business and a higher volume of sales.

Even so, it was clear that Mr. Truman was not proposing their complete elimination, but rather their reduction by an amount equal to the estimate of increased income from closing other tax loopholes.

Mr. Truman made no recommendation for repeal of many other excise taxes that were either initiated or raised during the war. These include manufacturers' excise levies on phonograph records, camera equipment and light bulbs; theater admissions, cabaret taxes, and taxes on bowling, billiards and club dues.

Furthermore, he did not ask for any modifications of the high Federal taxes, boosted during the war, on gasoline and liquors.

These were the loopholes that the Chief Executive proposed should be filled up.

1. Exemptions now enjoyed by oil and mining interests. These involve allowances for depletion that sometimes amount to as much as half of net income, Mr. Truman said.

He cited the case of one operator developing properties yielding nearly five million dollars in one year without paying any income tax. He was able to use the exemptions to escap tax payment on other income. Thus, in five years, he paid less than $100,000 in income taxes although his income from nonoil sources alone averaged almost one million dollars each year.

2. The abuse of tax exemptions accorded to educational and charitable organizations.

In some instances, Mr. Truman said, competitive advantage has been gained when an exempt institution enters into business operations not related to its educational activities. And sometimes, he added, speculative business ventures have been conducted under the cloak of a charitable, and tax exempt, enterprise.

3. "A quirk" in the present law that relieves life insurance companies from paying taxes on profits from their investments.

Thus, life insurance companies earning more than 1 5 billion dollars a year in investment income have paid no taxes since 1946.

4. Devices that permit individuals, notably movie producers and stars, to take unfair advantage of the rate differences between income and capital gatins taxes.

For example, temporary corporations have been set up and dissolved after making one film. The income, which should properly be taxed on the individual income rates running up to 77 per cent, is taxed only at the flat 25 percent capital gains rates.

Mr. Truman said that the correction of these loopholes should yield several hundreds of millions of dollars, thus permitting an equivalent reduction in excise tax receipts.

Mr. Truman had much to say on the need to revise and improve the estate and gift tax laws. Even before 1948, he said, they were out of line—too low—in comparison with other taxes. The Eightieth Congress' Tax Rduction Act reduced the yield from those levies 300 million dollars more..

Weaknesses in the present law, the President said, "include excessive exemptions, unduly low effective rates on most estates, and the fact that the law . . . favors large estates over smaller ones, and leaves substantial amounts of wealth completely beyond the reach of the tax laws . . .

"Furthermore, the present law affords excessive opportunities for tax reduction by splitting between the gift and estate taxes the total amount of wealth transferred by an individual.

"This makes the tax liability depend, not upon the amount of wealth which an individual leaves to his family, but upon the manner in which he arranges the disposition of his wealth."

The present exemptions should be reduced and the rates revised on these kinds of taxes, the President said.

On corporate profit taxes, he proposed that the present rate of 38 percent, on profits above $50,000 a year, be raised by an amount he did not specify, and be applied to corporate profits above $25,000.

Congressional tax experts concluded that to yield the desired revenue, the rate would have to be raised to 41 or 42 percent.

His other recommendations on corporate profit taxes were the sort designed to bring cheer to smaller businesses. Recently these smaller firms have been vocal in urging precisely what Mr. Truman proposed.

First, he said, the "excessive" rate of 53 percent on business earnings between $25,000 and $50,000 — the so-called "notch rate" —should be eliminated.

Second, the loss carry-forward provision should be extended from the present two-year period to five years. This would give more scope for offsetting losses in bad years against gains in good ones.

He also called for tax revisions of a sort that would favor American investment abroad. The details had been proposed to Congress last week by the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems.

The President accompanied his detailed recommendations for legislative changes with considerable discussion of tax and budget philosophy.

He argued that his policy was designed to bring about a balanced budget as rapidly as possible. But, he said, to try to balance it in fiscal 1951, either by reducing Federal expenditures or raising taxes by a large amount, would be self-defeating.

For, he said, the effect of the first would be to cripple activities necessary to the national economy and the national strength. He implied that the effect of the second would be to retard productive enterprise. It might so reduce the national output that the budget could not be balanced in subsequent years.

The proper policy, he went on, is to look to longer-range effects and possibilities. With an expanding economy, fostered by a wise and steady tax and budget policy, more income would flow. Hence more revenue would accrue to the Government. This would permit balanced budgets, and surplus for debt retirement, some years from now.

Mr. Truman warned against "foolish budget slashes." He said that "drastic reductions in Federal expenditures" and "drastic" tax increases could have "serious disruptive effects throughout our economy."

Revocation Of Gas Rate Hike Urged

George C. Webster, a gas appliance dealer here, filed suit yesterday in District Court to revoke the November 9 Public Utilities Commission order granting the Washington Gas Light Co. a $750,000 yearly rate increase.

Webster said he was suing as a user of gas and as trustee for the Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers. Another suit by Webster contesting the gas company's sale of appliances is pending in the court.

In requesting that the rate increase be set aside, Webster said that designation of Carlin H. Whitesell, jr., to the PUC for the case was illegal since he was not the Engineer Commissioner who is, according to the District Code, to be on the board.

The other members hearing the case were James H. Flanagan and James W. Lauderdale.

The suit asks that the rate increase be set aside as unlawful, arbitrary and capricious, according to Webster's attorneys, William A. Roberts, Robert E. McLaughlin and Francis J. Ortman.

It is claimed that the PUC permitted a charge of three million dollars to be included in operating costs when the sum was used to convert appliances to natural gas use. Also, it is charged, the gas company was allowed to include as costs sums spent for selling and installing gas appliances.

Another charge is that it was illegal to allow the gas company to include as operating costs properties not "used or useful in the manufacture, sale and distribution of gas."

House Chiefs By-Pass FEPC In Three Chances to Act on It

GOP Rules committeemen to vote to report the measure.

Opening with a White House "Big Four" legislative conference, at which Speaker Rayburn said FEPC was not discussed, yesterday's House field day was marked by a systematic Southern filibuster designed to slow down House action and political bickering across the aisle over which political party was actually blocking the civil rights measure.

The filibuster opened during reading of the President's tax message and continued through consideration of a rule clearing for later considerations legislation granting statehood to Alaska.

Five times House clerks were forced to call the roll of the House on points of no quorum mostly raised by Southerners. Speaker Rayburn declined to rule the motions "dilatory," saying it would take a "major operation" to determine whether the points of no quorum were deliberately designed to delay.

But the points of no quorum suddenly ceased when Majority Leader McCormack announced he would move for adjournment immediately following approval of a rule making the Hawaii statehood bill in order. To continue the House into night session, McCormack argued, would not provide a "healthy" atmosphere for consideration of legislation.

Record Vote on Alaska

By a 378-to-25 roll call vote, the House agreed to consider the Alaskan statehood bill and then by a voice vote adopted a similar resolution on the Hawaii statehood measure.

The unusual procedure of adopting a rule on a second bill before disposing of the earlier scheduled measure was designed to keep a "gentlemen's agreement" with the Hawaiian Delegate Joseph R. Farrington (R.), that the statehood measures would be considered one after the other, McCormack said. He added that neither of the bills will be "programmed" this week.

At a press conference before the debate opened, Speaker Rayburn, who is personally opposed to FEPC, told newsmen he would not recognize Lesinski to call up the FEPC measure, but instead would give the floor to Public Lands Chairman J. Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.) to call up the statehood measures.

Rayburn said Peterson had asked for Rules Committee clearance ahead of Lesinski.

"We had a terrific and rather bitter fight last week over the House rules," said the Speaker. "I don't think the atmosphere that prevails right now is such that we should start another fight over FEPC."

The political finger-pointing, that started last week during the rules fight, kept up all afternoon, with GOP and Democratic spokesman alternately accusing the other side of the aisle of "blocking" civil rights.

Both Sabath and Lesinski told the House the blocked FEPC bill could reach the House quickly if the four Republican Rules committeemen would vote for it.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) accused Democrats of "unmitigated gall" in appealing to Republicans to take them "off the spot."

"You had the opportunity to call up this legislation day after day during the last session, and you didn't do it," Brown told Lesinski. "You can't shift responsibility."

Representatives Jacob Javits (N. Y.) and James G. Fulton (Pa.), two of the Progressive Republicans who voted last week with Northern Democrats for the 21-day discharge rule, tried to persuade the House to vote down the motion to adjourn.

Roosevelt Backs Petition

Fulton told the House a vote for adjournment "is a vote against FEPC."

Later Representative Roosevelt called a press conference to discuss his plan to petition the FEPC bill to the House floor.

Roosevelt, who said he thought he spoke "on behalf of all liberal Democrats" said he was driving for a House discharge vote on February 13, despite the fact many Republicans plan to be out of town attending Lincoln Day dinners.

"They will be paying far more homage to Mr. Lincoln if they stay here and vote for FEPC," said the son of the late President Roosevelt.

Jury Triples Penalty In Numbers Appeal

For the second successive Monday in Arlington County Circuit Court, an appeal exploded in the face of a convicted numbers operator and the original jail sentence was tripled.

The dismayed gambler this time was Russell Roy, 33, of 2117 N. Cameron st., Arlington, who was convicted in Police Court last November and fined $100 and given a 30-day jail term.

The five-man circuit court jury which heard Roy's appeal yesterday upheld his conviction and exercising the prerogative given Virginia juries, stretched his jail sentence to 90 days.

Roy was arrested last October 26 in a boarding house at 4900 Lee hwy. by Detective Russell Runyon.

Roy denied ownership of the evidence seized by police and even disclaimed any knowledge of how the numbers racket is operated.

However, Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker, on cross examination, drew from Roy the admission that he paid a $100 fine and drew a suspended jail sentence when convicted on a numbers charge several years ago.

Immediately after Roy was sentenced yesterday, Mrs. Sarah McKnight, 52, who had been convicted last November on a similar charge and had appealed, waived a jury trial, reversed her plea and entered a plea of guilty before Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Arrested October 20 at her home, 1946 S. Lowell st., Mrs. McKnight was fined $50 and given 30 days in jail in police court.

Under the compromise, Mrs. McKnight pays the $50 fine and receives a six-month jail term with the understanding she will serve 10 days and be on probation for the remainder of the term.

Mind Still Blank

Bolivian's Ex-Wife Flies To New York

Mrs. Juanita Eden Patino, estranged wife of a Bolivian tin magnate, flew to New York from Washington last night, her mind still a blank as to her whereabouts between January 15 and last Saturday when she arrived in a Fredericksburg, Va., hospital.

She appeared, Saturday night, at Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg, her first knowledgable movement since the night of January 15, when she disappeared in New York where she is a night club entertainer.

Mrs. Patino, estranged wife of Ramon Patino, 35, wealthy Bolivian tin mand, had undergone a "several emotional shock," according to physicians at Mary Washington Hospital, and they said they accepted her story that she had had an amnesia attack.

With Twin Sister.

When she arrived here, Mrs. Patino was with her twin sister, Miss Anita Eden, who was once her dancing partner. They arrived by train, then took a plane for New York.

Mrs. Patino said, both here and in Fredericksburg, that her last memory was of being in a Lexington avenue bar in New York with a friend of her estranged husband, who had been acting as go-between in negotiations regarding a divorce and custody of the couple's two children.

Mrs. Patino said she next remembered getting into a long, black auto, and riding for a long time.

Walked a "Long Way"

She appeared Saturday night at a restaurant at Acotink, after "walking a long way down a road." There, she bought a bus ticket for Fredericksburg.

The bus, driven by M. Maurice Herndon, of Richmond, arrived at Fredericksburg at 7:30 p. m. Saturday, but Mrs. Patino did not arrive at the hospital until 10 p. m.

Mrs. Patino said when she last remembered events in New York, she wore an emerald and diamond ring and a gold wrist watch, as well as her purse. They were gone when she came to the hospital.

She married Ramon Patino after meeting him during a dance tour with her sister to Bolivia in 1940. They parted six years later.

Gambling Trial Nears Its End As Government Rests Case

identified yesterday as records of his numbers bets, were taken by United States marshals March 25 from an air-conditioned sound-proof pine-paneled room in a bungalow at 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, Md., in one of eight simultaneous raids made that day under the direction of United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

During his testimony, Trice leaned over to Judge Alexander Holtzoff and complained of a severe headache, asking for two aspirins and a glass of water.

Under cross examination by Billeci's lawyer, Myron G. Ehrlich, Trice admitted he is currently a patient at Mount Alto Veterans Hospital "in a locked-in ward."

Asked if he were under mental observation, Trice said "I don't know if you'd call it that." Prosecutor William Hitz said after the trial that Trice is being treated for epilepsy.

Ehrlich then asked the witness: "Isn't it a fact you have recently been charged in Municipal Court with assault?"

"That's not your business," Trice replied, "and I don't think I have to answer that."

Hitz then stipulated with Ehrlich that Trice had been so charged.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Metropolitan Police Department's vice squad, spent 30 minutes on the stand as a Government expert yesterday, giving Judge Holtzoff and the jury detailed instructions on how to play the numbers.

Harry E. Stine, 2008 Glen Ross rd., Silver Spring, Md., superintendent of the Division of Mail Orders, Post Office Department, produced, in answer to a Government subpena, a money order from Rose King, 1417 H st. ne., to Acalotti.

Mrs. King testified earlier in the trial that she paid part of her numbers debts to Acalotti with money orders. She had previously denied playing numbers with him or sending him money orders.

The jury was dismissed at 2:30 p. m. when defense attorneys filed nine motions for directed verdicts of acquittal and for the striking of key Government testimony.

All were denied by Judge Holtzoff.

UAW Drops Demand For Chrysler Pension

Detroit, Jan. 23 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers Union scaled down its demands on Chrysler Corp. today and surprisingly offered to accept a flat 10-cent hourly wage boost instead of pensions.

Only 48 hours before a strike deadline, the union cut its total "package" demand from 11½ to 10 cents an hour.

Chrysler indicated the proposal would be rejected, referring to it as "obviously a political move on the part of the union."

The UAW said it would be willing either to split the 10-cent package into 6 cents for pensions and 4 cents for hospital-medical benefits, to divide it in some other satisfactory way or even take in the form of a direct pay raise for 89,000 hourly rated Chrysler workers.

The proposal came as a surprise because pensions rather than wage increases have been the principal fourth-round bargaining goal not only of the auto workers but of virtually all CIO unions.

Until today the UAW had been insisting on 7 cents an hour to cover pensions and 4½ cents for hospital-medical benefits.

Justice Vinson Observes 60th Birthday Quietly

Chief Justice of the United States Fred M. Vinson didn't take a "legal holiday" yesterday though he might have done so in honor of his sixtieth birthday.

The justice's birthday fell on Sunday and he was the recipient of messages of congratulations from his many friends.

But yesterday he was back at work at the Supreme Court although, technically, the court is in "recess" until the next decision day, February 6.

Marylanders To Fight CTC

Prince Georges County civic groups will oppose a Capital Transit fare boost request at a Baltimore hearing today.

On December 29 the company filed an emergency petition to raise its fares from five to seven cents in each Maryland zone. It is expected to attempt to prove, before the Maryland Public Service Commission today, that althoug this increase will add $486,000 yearly to its revenues it will still run $227,000 behind in Maryland.

An arbitration board award recently forced the company to give its employes a 10-cent-an-hour pay raise.

Bill Would Curb Unions

States—Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Only half of western Pennsylvania's 50,000 miners are at work. In West Virginia, 12,000 are idle out of 110,000.

About 9000 miners refused to work in Ohio or were kept out by pickets. All 20 major shaft mines are closed.

Pickets are active in many States. There was no violence.

Alabama counts 6500 of its 18,000 UMW miners out on strike. Most of them work for steel company subsidiaries.

In the Pittsburgh area, 51 of 122 mines are dark and silent. Roving pickets are expected to shut down still more operations.

Among the closed pits are two owned by the Duquesne Light Co., now facing a fuel shortage. The Pittsburgh utility said it has only enough coal to keep up full power supplies to 2000 large and small manufacturing plants through this week.

Thousands of Schools 'Phony,' Is Report

J. L. McCaskill, associate secretary of the National Education Association's department of higher education, said yesterday there probably are several thousand "phony" schools and colleges now operating in the country.

McCaskill told a reporter that most of these institutions began operating in recent years to "chisel" in on the veterans training program.

Irritated Public

The Muzak Corp. has shown a sense of public relations in withdrawing its record service from transit radio. Whatever other reasons motivated this move, Muzak seems to have recognized that the deliberate irritation of even a minority of the public does its enterprise harm. Every time the ugly phrase "captive audience" is used, the transit companies, radio and advertising in general all suffer.

Although other music can be substituted for the Muzak recordings, on the surface the cancellation appears to offer an out for the Capital Transit Co. to rid itself of the transit radio intrusion. Whether the company can readily avail itself of this out is another matter, for it might incur considerable expense in abrogating its contract. The fact that with forced listening the company is gratuitously making enemies right and left would in the long run, we believe, justify the expense of cancellation. However, there also are other legal moves that might serve to take Capital Transit off the hook.

The first is a decision on whether the company is exceeding its franchise by imposing radio programs and commercials on its patrons—a point never satisfactorily answered by the Public Utilities Commission. The second, and more important, is whether FM radio stations themselves are abusing their licenses by using frequencies granted in the broad public interest to direct narrow types of programs chiefly at streetcar and bus riders. This is a most significant point demanding the attention of the Federal Communications Commission.

Civil Defense

Appointment of Paul J. Larsen to revive civil defense planning satisfies two basic criteria for this important task. Mr. Larsen is first of all a civilian, as any director of civil defense should be; his appointment allays rumors that the Administration was considering a military man. Secondly, he is an atomic scientist with considerable administrative and organizational experience at the Los Alamos and Sandia laboratories; this background should endow him with discretion about what not to do in civil defense planning as well as about what must be done. For along with the danger that not enough will be done, there is another danger that overstress will lead to panic thinking and great waste of manpower.

For more than a year civil defense has been in a sort of coma. After the late Russell J. Hopley turned in his report on Civil Defense for National Security to Defense Secretary Forrestal, the Office of Civil Defense Planning was abolished and its functions transferred to the National Security Resources Board. The trouble was (and still is) that the NSRB itself was without a full-time chairman. Aside from collecting information, about all the NSRB did in civil defense was to send out the Hopley Report to the States as a guide.

The advent of the Russian atomic bomb has brought new interest in civil defense, and one sign is the system of aircraft observer training announced with the Larsen appointment. This is a step in the right direction, though it is important not to overemphasize this aspect before other plans have been perfected. A more basic step is the recent distribution to State Governors of the summary on Medical Aspects of Atomic Energy. This study, a single chapter from the still unpublished handbook on atomic energy, points out how casualties from atomic attack can be materially reduced through advance preparation.

Civil defense, like military security, must be predicated upon a calculated risk. Instead of elaborate decentralization or burrowing underground, sensible preparation calls for skeleton planning—the readying of local emergency plans, the training of a nucleus of local doctors in radiation medicine and possibly the stockpiling of mobile reserves of medical supplies. Self-help is the key to effective civil defense, though a considerable degree of State and national coordination is necessary and local groups will need the advice of military planners on what to prepare for. This is the sort of direction Mr. Larsen ought to be able to provide.

The renewed attention to civil defense emphasizes the need to do something about the larger job of chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman has been filling this post on a part-time basis since it became vacant more than 13 months ago. It is incredible that no qualified chairman could be found in the interim. If no appointment is forthcoming shortly, we think Congress ought to look into the matter as a defect in national security.

Tears Of The Crocodile

Among the myths that are being sedulously circulated as a result of the Formosa decision is that the Administration has killed its own Truman Doctrine. The funeral orations have been delivered by one after the other of the China interventionists in Congress. Some of them never favored the Truman Doctrine, anyway; but that fact, far from moderating their wailing, has made their lamentations even more shrill. A flock of commentators has seconded the dirge, and the only person who seems unperturbed by the outcry is the parent who is accused of the foul murder of his child, viz, President Truman.

Mr. Truman is not as hard-hearted as the serenity he maintains in the midst of this Irish wake would seem to indicate. We have consulted the child's birth certificate, dated March 13, 1947, and can vouch for the fact that whatever has been killed, it is not the Truman Doctrine. The Truman Doctrine, contrary to the burial notices, was not a declaration to "contain" Communist expansion. Indeed, a reading and rereading of the message does not disclose either the word containment or the word communism. The message, inspired by Britain's announcement that it could no longer help Greece, laid down this general policy:

> It must be the policy of the United States to support free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressure.

The first thing to notice about the declaration is its positiveness; it was for, not against. It emphasizes aid, to be given in one or more of a variety of forms, depending upon circumstances. However, the doctrine indicated what kind of aid was primarily meant; it was economic:

> Our help should be primarily economic and financial aid which is essential to economic stability and orderly political processes.

On the basis of the Truman Doctrine, economic and financial aid and then military aid started to flow to Greece and also to Turkey. The reason was that Greece and Turkey were struggling to prevent the Russians from cutting the Mediterranean and encircling the Middle East. Ask any military strategist and you will find that this was all-important to American security. There is only one Mediterranean, only one Greece; and, as Secretary Acheson has said, the American interest differs with locality. In this sense the Truman Doctrine has been administered—is still being administered. It is being applied all over the world according to the requirements of situations and geography and the limitations of American resources.

Out of the Truman Doctrine, for instance, stemmed the Marshall Plan in Europe and the Far East. The Marshall Plan followed the wise maxim underlying the Truman Doctrine of helping people who helped themselves. It would have been money down the drain to have any other rule. Wherever there was a contrary practice, as in China, the result has been worse than wasteful; it has been a boomerang. The Marshall Plan, moreover, was followed by the North Atlantic Pact and the arms program—all tracing back to the Truman Doctrine. They all sprang from the original concept of supporting free peoples who were struggling to keep themselves free which was expressed in the Truman Doctrine. The conclusion is that the crocodile tears now being shed over the demise of the Truman Doctrine are all eyewash.

Fighting Suppression

The incontestable logic of the Heller Committee's appeal for the Kefauver home-rule bill ought to bring a flood of signatures to Discharge Petition No. 19 designed to rescue that measure from the House District Committee. The group headed by Mr. Heller is solely interested in improving the machinery of Congress for the performance of its function as the maker of national policy. The committee correctly sees that if Congressmen give thousands of valuable man-hours per year to such local problems as the elimination of weeds, the regulation of traffic and the destruction of starlings, the efficiency of Congress in doing its national job will be impaired. The fact is that the machinery of Congress can never be modernized without a transfer of this local function to a local body.

Congress has already approved the principle involved, as the Heller Committee points out, in dealing with the Territories. Alaska and Hawaii remain under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress, but Congress could not act as a local legislature for those areas without abdicating its responsibility to the Nation as a whole. The same is true in the case of the District of Columbia. That is one of the major reasons why the Senate passed the Kefauver bill without a record vote and why President Truman and both the major parties have indorsed the principle behind it.

The real question before the House is not whether home rule for the District is a sound policy. The measure has been so widely approved that it is assumed the House will acquiesce if given the opportunity. The real question is whether a handful of Congressmen in the House District Committee will be permitted to prevent the House from expressing its will. Last week the House courageously rejected the bid of the Rules Committee for power to bottle up bills that are a part of the Administration's program. In the present instance the District Committee is asserting that right. Of course, it is a legislative committee, but any suppression of a measure which has such widespread bipartisan support as does the home-rule bill seems to us an inexcusable abuse of power. Apparently this stranglehold can be broken only by getting a majority in the House to sign Discharge Petition No. 19. The duty to thwart dictation to the House seems to us as clear in this case as it was in the case of the Rules Committee.

RFC Investigation

We agree with Senator Fulbright that the time has come to investigate the lending activities of the RFC. This is not because the agency has been under fire for making large advances to a number of favored corporations. The proposed investigation is intended not as a probe designed to discredit the motives of RFC officials in making these loans, but as an examination of the policies governing RFC lending—whether the law authorizing it to make loans is being interpreted too liberally.

Furthermore, the most important issue calling for attention is not whether the RFC has taken liberties with the law. It is whether it is in the public interest to permit a Government lending agency to make direct loans to business when the country is not at war, and business is flourishing. Obviously Government agencies are always subjected to heavy political pressure, particularly when they have money to lend. RFC is the great example in point, and the rapid expansion of Government lending under normal conditions is cause for concern.

With few exceptions private capital and private banks are now able to provide the funds required to finance business expansion. It is true that small businesses are sometimes unable to qualify for longer-term loans. If the Federal Reserve Banks, however, were empowered to guarantee loans of this type made by local banks, these business concerns could be taken care of. Moreover, it is open to question whether a company that cannot obtain financial backing from private agencies, with the aid of Government loan guarantees, should be permitted to apply for direct loans from the Government, either in small or in large amounts.

In any case, if the RFC continues to engage in direct lending operations of this kind, Congress should impose tighter restrictions on the scope and character of such activities.

Tito's Deviation

The widening breach between the Cominform and Yugoslavia is beginning to deepen beyond the point of personal feuds and conflicting ambitions. Reports from Belgrade indicate that communism in the land of Marshal Tito is taking a turn that has never been tolerated in latter-day Russia or the satellite countries under the thumb of the Kremlin. For some time there has been an increasing decentralization of power. Tito appears willing to let local communities exercise a larger measure of control over both local political and economic affairs within the general pattern of socialism to which the regime subscribes. And last week the Parliament approved an electoral reform under which any person may run for Parliament by obtaining the signatures of 100 voters. This is a sharp departure from the practice of offering a single slate of candidates approved by the regime in power which prevails in other Communist lands.

Of course, this relaxation of controls does not mean that Tito is breaking away from the one-party system. It is not to be supposed that any substantial opposition will be tolerated in Belgrade. However, Tito seems to be making a bid for more and more popular support as a means of fortifying his regime in the struggle with the Kremlin. To maximize that support Tito will have to show some trust in the people as well as the locality. The tendency is producing a different brand of communism, if not tempering it. Some experts go so far as to say that Tito in order to keep up Yugoslav opposition must go all the way to the representative system. Every development of this sort will be watched with the keenest interest in the free world.

Love Stuff

How far the national preoccupation with romance will go is a question that has been raised by the invasion of comic books by what is called "love stuff." Recently the "boy meets girl" theme was found to be taking over many Western story magazines. Now in about one third of comic books, it is estimated, cartoon courtship has replaced slapstick comedy. Although directed at a teen-age audience, these love comics are said to be finding many followers among adults, the assumption being, as always, that frustrated housewives find them a means of vicarious romance.

Total readership of comic books is put at around 70 million. This means that at least 20 million readers are turning to comics for heart thrills. Since "love stuff" also dominates soap operas, movies, slick magazine fiction and popular songs, most of the population must be constantly engrossed in at least the chaff of love. Yet the dissidence and violence of the times do not reflect such preoccupation. Or perhaps the times are promoting this escape into a world where human beings look even intermittently on each other with favor.

HILL-VIEW

By dusk, upon the twinkling town,
From this high hill-top we look down.

A thousand lamp-lit windows fair,
Like golden flowers, are blooming there;

And still, when flowers fade away,
Long after moonrise, here we stay,

Above the town, so high, so high,
So near the stars, my love and I.

Slapped Policeman

The forthright manner of Representative O'Hara's replies when interviewed about his part in the cop-slapping suggests that the press exceeded the bounds of propriety. After all, Representative O'Hara is no mere man; he is a Congressman. And those of us who have, on occasion, resisted cop-slapping impulses (and some less fortunate who have not) must bear in mind that we citizens only live and pay taxes here, qualifications which hardly entitle us to courteous treatment by our police department or to the privilege of whitewash.

"Old Age Insurance"

Your editorial of January 16 promises to discuss the merits of the House bill on "old age insurance benefits."

While the "extension" of this system is a step in the right direction since it provides the provision of such benefits to persons not now covered by the act, I am wondering whether the effect upon present beneficiaries has been considered. If it has, it has escaped my attention.

Of the 11 million persons eligible, many present beneficiaries—particularly those formerly employed by private corporations—will not benefit from a proposed increase of payments. Rather it will represent a reduction in obligations to the corporations who are making pension payments.

Many such individuals receiving monthly pensions from corporations have had to agree that "from this amount the corporation will deduct any amount paid by old age benefit insurance.

Investor Protection

Senator Frear of Delaware is entitled to praise for taking a bold step in presenting new legislation on the Securities and Exchange Commission, which body has in the past considered itself court, judge and jury in all matters affecting the creation and sale of securities.

In presenting S.2408, Senator Frear intends to require the so-called group of "smaller" companies to register with the commission, on the theory that the holders of such securities are entitled to protection.

However, the Frear bill does not go far enough, in that the many present requirements of the SEC affecting securities are too arbitrary and do not allow private investors, or those who represent them, to secure proper protection while corporations are given facility.

I believe that every single investor who owns stock of a corporation that has sold it publicly is entitled to Government protection, even if the corporation has only a few stockholders. A private investor, and particularly a small investor, cannot afford to engage expensive counsel when he believes he has been wronged by a corporation which has sold him securities. There should be created special regional courts, as adjuncts to the commission, to judge the complaints of investors and permit investors who cannot afford to pay for counsel to come before such courts and present their cases in person.

No Men Working

I drove past two construction projects Sunday on the highway and the small safety signs "Caution—Men Working" were very carefully in place although there were no men even near the place and there wouldn't be over the entire weekend. It would appear sensible to me that the signs should be up when work is in progress and should be taken down at the end of working hours. HOWARD PRINCE.

"Mighty Mo"

Please print my reply to Ex-Fly Boys' January 21 letter in regards to using the "Mighty Mo" for a target. That's probably the only way they could hit the "Mighty Mo," while she's stuck in the mud, a "sitting duck." I doubt it even then. NAVY.

Had you received a letter signed "Ex-Sea Boys" ridiculing the Air Corps because one of its B-29s had crashed, with or without loss of life, I believe that you would have had good enough taste not to have published it. No Navy man I know would have had the poor taste to write such a letter. J. E. HAMILTON.

Maritime Subsidy

Five years after the end of World War II we have fewer ships in operation than we did at the start. We certainly learn our lessons the hard way and forget them quickly.

There is now a proposal before Congress, indorsed by the Maritime Commission, to provide 36 million dollars yearly to subsidize 200 American tramp ships, to enable them to compete on equal terms with foreign ships. Because of ship subsidies by foreign governments to their shipping, differentials in wages between American and foreign ships and other factors, American ships are severely handicapped in competing with ships of other nations.

Since we are spending 14 billion dollars yearly for defense, it would seem very poor judgment to allow one of the pillars of that defense to decay for the lack of the comparatively significant sum of 36 millions.

"Mr. Acheson's Scalp"

Mr. Acheson has taken up a policy of wu-wei or non-action in China, in order, he says, "not to deflect from the Russians to ourselves . . . the anger . . . of the Chinese people." The Washington Post editorially agrees. ("Mr. Acheson's Scalp," January 17). Does the editor of The Post realize that, like the mills of God, the anger of the Chinese people is indeed "exceeding slow"? The Manchu domination of China lasted from 1644 until 1912.

Let's look at the record. In Europe, finding appeasement got us nowhere with Russia, we resisted. Our token force remained in Berlin, we carried out the remarkable airlift operation. We stayed put, collaborated in the foundation of a western Germany under Russia's nose. We were respected.

In China, on the other hand, we started on this wu-wei business not yesterday, not last week, but two years ago. Our policy-makers decided they didn't like Chiang; they had a fuzzy idea that Chinese Communists were not real Communists; they wanted a "change in Government."

As a result, the American people, unapprised because of the suppression of the Wedemeyer report with its realistic recommendations for aid to Nationalist China, saw two things occur and knew not what was happening.

First they saw our token force in China, the First Marine Division, hastily withdrawn in 1947. Most significant was this flight, because it was taken by both factions in China—and by the Cominform—not only as definite admission of American weakness, but also as plain indication of our intention to abandon Chiang.

Second, they saw Chinese Nationalist armies, American-trained, armed and equipped, suddenly collapse in Manchuria after a short-lived but brilliant success against the Communists. Unrevealed was the cause—refusal of the United States to furnish ammunition and spare parts for the American material. On the other hand, the Communists were in possession of Japanese material captured by us and turned over to the Russians.

Does Mr. Micawber Acheson really believe that his wait, "for something to turn up," is not now in fact the risk of throwing all Asia to the Russian wolves? Why blow hot in Europe, cold in Asia? LAURA N. DUPUY.

Jefferson On Slavery

A well-written and logical letter proposing the nam. Douglass Bridge for the new bridge to Anacostia was published in your issue of January 16, signed E. B. Henderson. The effect is destroyed by a single word in the last sentence. In this he states: "More than any other single person Douglass . . . made effective protest against human slavery." If this word had been colored it would have been perhaps true as a matter of history, but if the word simple was not a printer's misprint, it put Douglass above Jefferson and Lincoln, which is a fantastic misstatement.

The contributions of Jefferson to the abolition of slavery were in Lincoln's opinion remarkable, yet they are little known. In the original draft of the Declaration of Independence Jefferson wrote a fierce attack on the King for having defeated the efforts of the Virginia House of Burgesses to stop the slave trade. Although concurred in by his fellow committeemen, it was expunged by the Congress. The Constitution provided that this infamous traffic could not be prohibited for 20 years.

During Jefferson's Presidency he sent an eloquent message to Congress demanding the proscription of slavery. This was done by Congress in 1808.

His idea of how to fight slavery was: (1) to cut off the supply, (2) to confine it to the States east of the Alleghany Mountains. Number 1 was thus accomplished.

As to No. 2, as Lincoln stated in his Columbus speech (September 16, 1859), Jefferson proposed in the Congress that slavery should be forbidden in settlements west of the mountains. It was lost by a single vote and Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky became slave States.

Then he persuaded Virginia to make a gift of her vast possessions north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi River. The condition was attached that there should be no slavery in the States to be created from this area, to which Virginia had acquired title by the victory over the British at Vincennes—a contest in which no other colony participated. So Lincoln told his audience that it was owing to this man Jefferson that they (in Ohio) were standing on free ground. J. R. KEAN.

Meaning Of The Hiss Case

By Marquis Childs

Loss Of Faith

AS REPORTED in one news account of the reaction to the verdict of guilty in the Hiss trial, a citizen remarked that, no matter who you are, it would leave a bad taste in the mouth. That probably hits close to what most Americans feel.

It is a reminder of a time that many would prefer to forget. It was a time when doubt and distrust had eaten deeply into the American faith in America. The grinding, jolting shock of the great depression had been followed by the threat of Nazism with the loudly proclaimed goal of world conquest and the overthrow of democracy.

To some Americans Soviet communism seemed the only answer, both to the world's economic ills and to the threat of Fascist conquest. The veils of illusion that still shrouded the Soviet system were sufficiently thick for those who deliberately chose to transfer their faith to the remote and unknowable Mecca of Moscow.

Alger Hiss has now been found guilty by an American jury under the American process of law of having perjured himself when he denied that he served Soviet communism by supplying secret State Department documents to a Soviet spy ring. His chief accuser, Whittaker Chambers, has confessed to serving Russian masters over a long period.

What is so often forgotten, and conveniently by some, is that the failure of faith in the Western democracies took not one form, but two forms. Some Americans were saying that maybe Mussolini had the right idea. Hadn't he made the trains run on time and didn't he do away with begging in Italy?

Hitler had his adherents in this country and Great Britain, and they were not merely in the screwball fringe and in the German-American Bunds. At highly respectable dinner tables one heard the opinion that while, of course, you couldn't approve everything he did, yet still Hitler was necessary to keep Europe on the right path. Highly placed Britishers were received by der fuehrer and came away saying that he wasn't such a bad fellow after all and perhaps democracy needed some such tonic.

THUS THE pit of disillusion had two boundaries. If fascism had had an international organization, perhaps these same admirers might have been its agents. As it was, they were carriers of an infection of distrust tinged with fear and hate.

There is some reason to believe that it is this same fringe which is now gloating over the Hiss verdict and which took such jubilant satisfaction in the conviction of the 11 Communists in New York. The admirers of fascism have an inherent distrust of ideas and opinions that deviate in the slightest from the orthodox. That is part of the psychosis of distrust and fear that is fascism.

However distasteful it may be, we should not hesitate to expose and anlyze the acts and the motives of those who conspired against the Government of the United States. Only in this way will we understand the tragic significance of their disillusion.

But when this is pushed to the point of prosecution—and persecution—of men and women for the ideas they hold, then we imperil the very base of a free society. We make ourselves over in the deformed image of what we profess to loathe. And it is a sad commentary that those who were most guilty of denying the American faith, such as Chambers, now seem to want to make us all pay for their sense of guilt by starting us off on bigger and bettter heresy trials.

THERE IS a danger that we shall stamp out the free expression of ideas and opinions. It was well expressed in a courageous editorial in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch following the convictions of the Communists:

"However much we may dislike the 11 Communists, however unimportant they are in our society, convicting them goes against one of the greatest traditions in all American history—that which insists upon the worth of the individual citizen as a person rather than as a minute part of the state. The Communists themselves do not accept this dignity of the individual, but if we are to preserve it for all who deserve it we cannot deny it to any person. Punish the Communists for their ideas and we open the way to punish others with less cause or no cause at all."

One of those who derives most satisfaction from this Hiss verdict is Representative Richard M. Nixon of California. Nixon can say with truth that it would never have happened if it had not been for his persistence. Obviously he intends to make political capital out of this to try to get himself elected Senator in the race this fall.

I have the feeling that it will not win him very much popularity among the rank and file of voters. It is too deeply mortifying to most Americans to be reminded of the unhappy era when faith fell away and, more important, there will be a persistent doubt whether Hiss received a fair trial in the present atmosphere when guilty accusers seek to unload their burden of guilt by public accusation. President Truman, talking, in his State of the Union message, about what a strong and free America can do came much closer to the temper of today.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"The Line Of Fire"

IN WHAT is the most famous of all his great speeches, Churchill once said: "There are many who would hold an inquest in the House of Commons on the conduct of the governments—and of Parliaments, for they are in it too — during the years which led up to this catastrophe." He was speaking of "the colossal military disaster" of 1940 when France was defeated and Britain was driven off the continent. We might all of us today, as we tear ourselves apart quarreling over our own disaster in China, remember Mr. Churchill's answer to the many who wanted to hold an inquest at that time.

Lippmann

Mr. Churchill's answer was that "Of this I am quite sure, that if we open a quarrel between the past and the present, we shall find that we have lost the future." Is it too much to hope that Senator Knowland and Senator Taft and Senator Bridges and Senator Wherry might be willing to learn from the example of a man, who is so much greater than any of them, who was faced with a crisis so much more terrible than ours, who, moreover, had a record of consistency and of foresight unlike theirs which entitled him to say "I told you so" had he not been above such vulgar vanity.

THE ACTION of the House in defeating the bill for Korean aid is the first, but by no means the last, practical illustration of how we shall lose the future if we pursue the quarrel between the past and the present. The issue in the Korean aid bill is whether the United States will honor a commitment made to the people of southern Korea and in the presence of the United Nations. The question of honor is paramount. It cannot decently be submerged in the quarrel about Formosa or Chiang, or written down because we may have grave doubts as to whether we should ever have made the commitment at all.

If it is true, as Senator Knowland says, that "the Koreans in this case are just the innocent bystanders in the House . . . they got into the line of fire," it is time he paused to ask himself what else is going to happen if he keeps on firing on his line of fire.

IT IS becoming more and more ominously clear what is going to happen. The United States is going to be prevented from playing any useful role in Asia. The Korean scuttle will teach the other weak peoples of Asia that American policy can be overturned at any time if by accident they happen to get in the line of fire of congressional politics.

On the instability, the undependability, the irresponsibility of fluctuating congressional majorities, no people can be expected to stake their future, no leaders can be expected to stake their careers and their lives. The damage which has been done to the moral credit of this country is incalculable but enormous, and it will take more than a reversal of this vote to repair it.

BUT THERE is worse to come. The real effect of the Formosan crusade is to isolate the United States in the Far East. For while Mr. Knowland has not persuaded the President to intervene in Formosa, he is still able to keep this country entangled with the remainders of Chiang's government. Tied to Chiang, we are now separated—as respects China and the Far East—from our most important and our only effective and influential allies, from Great Britain, from India, and Pakistan. We cannot have a concerted policy with them because they have broken with Chiang and we cannot break with him.

We cannot do anything for Chiang. But thanks to Senator Knowland and his friends, we cannot do anything without Chiang. We cannot fight for Chiang. We cannot negotiate because of Chiang. The result is that to the accompaniment of heartbreaking cries for an "Asia policy," our policy is perforce to have no policy at all. It is not surprising that the Republican isolationists are in fact isolating the United States from Asia.

THAT IS exactly what the Kremlin most wants—to push us out of the Far East so that we cannot influence or interfere with the consolidation of their empire. The fact that these Republican Senators make louder anti-Communist noises than anyone else will not obscure the actual results: that they have undermined our influence in Korea and, therefore, in other vulnerable regions—and that they are compelling us to go down, lashed to the mast of Chiang's rotten and sinking ship.

Of course, the Russians are exploiting this windfall to the limit, inciting the Chinese to create incidents which will keep us embroiled in China—and separated from our allies. The Russians know we cannot go to war about China, and so thanks to the way the Senators have set it up for them, they are making it impossible for us to resort to diplomacy.

AND WHAT is this destructive quarrel in Washington about? It is supposed to be about the past —about the reasons why American policy in China ended in disaster. But do we really suppose that we who are in the midst of it all, and can know only bits and pieces of the great story, can render the verdict of history? I do not believe we ought to overestimate our knowledge and our capacity for judging history so crudely and so grossly as all that.

FOR EXAMPLE, a colleague of mine, whose knowledge of the China story is considerable, writes that the "safer policy" in China would have been "to attempt in China, on an even larger scale, the same sort of operation we have now successfully completed in Greece." The difference in scale between Greece and China is, measured in population as one is to 58, and measured in area about as one is to 60. That is approximately the difference in scale as between a kitten and a tiger.

But the difference in scale is not the whole difference between Greece and China. There is this difference, too: Greece's nearest important neighbor is the Soviet Union. The "operation we have now successfully completed" in Greece, assuming it is successfully completed, was successfully completed only when Tito quarreled with Russia and turned his back on Greece. A similar operation in China could hardly have been conducted by us without making it virtually certain that as we increased our intervention for Chiang, the Soviets would step up their intervention for Mao. With 4000 miles of common frontier and a reserve of infantry incomparably greater than our own, what prospect would there have been of our completing the operation successfully?

That ought to suggest that General Marshall, who decided for intervention in Greece and against intervention in China, may have known what he was doing.

U. S. Can't Contain Russia By Coalition, Lippmann Says

The United States cannot hope to contain Soviet expansion by organizing a worldwide coalition against Russia, Walter Lippmann, noted writer on foreign affairs, declared last night.

The columnist argued that events of the past year have made impossible the cementing of any such effective coalition among the nations bordering the Russian-controlled area.

The alternative policy that he recommended for America from now on "will have to be to frustrate and to disorganize and to disintegrate the Russian coalition."

Speaks in New York

Lippmann made his statement, an attack on the "containment policy" generally identified with George Kennan, Counselor of the State Department, before a dinner meeting of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, in New York.

Lippmann said that the combined effect of the events of the past year "marks the beginning of the end of the idea that the world must align itself into two coalitions: the one directed from Moscow and the other from Washington."

That idea, he pointed out, had been accepted as Marxist-Leninist dogma by the Kremlin. It also had been accepted as true, he said, by the United States. But, he said, there are strong reasons for doubting it.

Rather, he argued, there is now a powerful, presumably irresistible tendency for the nations just outside the Russian orbit—among others, Germany, Japan, and the nations of South and Southeast Asia — to seek their security through neutrality and to avoid all entangling alliances.

We must encourage that desire, Lippmann contended, for our power is not such that we can afford them security in an alliance with us.

The power that we have, he concluded, can support a policy that seeks to disorganize the Russian coalition, and to deter its agressions on the would-be neutrals by the threat of "massive retaliation."

Five Key Events

These are the recent events which Lippmann saw as ending hope for the containment-through-coalition policy:

1. The success of the Communist-organized revolution in China.
2. The appearance of India, Pakistan and Indonesia as independent Asiatic states.
3. The secession of Yugoslavia, under Tito, from the Soviet orbit.
4. The revival of Germany as a European power.
5. The end of the American monopoly of atomic weapons.

The first four of these have a "common denominator," Lippmann declared.

"In each case one or both of the two coalitions has lost or is losing control of an important country; in no case is it at all certain that the one coalition has won the country that the other has lost."

On the new condition created by the Russian achievement of the atomic bomb, the columnist had this to say:

"During the period of our monopoly there existed a military stalemate between the Red Army and the American strategic air force armed with atomic weapons. The one was a deterrent upon the other. . .

"The Soviet achievement of the atomic bomb, even if relative to us they have only a few bombs, has changed the balance of military power. For it has raised the critical question of how west Germany and Japan are to be defended against atomic bombardment. . .

"They cannot be made secure any longer by armored divisions, or by naval power, or by the threat of American aerial reprisal. Germany and Japan are in fact the ideal targets of atomic warfare. . .

"In the exposed and vulnerable countries around the periphery of the Soviet Union the effect . . . has been to reinforce decisively their natural impulse to disassociate themselves from the two coalitions and to seek such security as they can find by recovering their independence from both.

"For the new situation means that neither the USSR nor the USA can offer the vulnerable countries any guarantee, or even a reasonable hope, of security against the fearful devastation of atomic warfare."

Accordingly, he said, the Germans cannot align themselves with either side. They will avoid entangling alliances. This is the course that India, Pakistan and Indonesia have already taken.

The same logic applies to Japan and the statellite nations of Eastern Europe, Lippmann said. They cannot be defended by either side. So their hope for security is to disengage themselves from the giant powers, and "Tito is already doing just that."

Lippman's Recommendation

Lippmann recommended therefore that American foreign policy should:

1. Encourage German unity and independence.
2. Encourage Titoism in eastern Europe by taking a firm stand, as we have already done, not against communism as such, but against Russian imperialism and aggression.
3. Offer Red China what we have traditionally offered Chinese governments—support against dismemberment and imperialist aggression.
4. Recognize the vital interest of Japan in neutrality and the necessity of dealing with both great powers.

There is a general tendency toward national independence and military neutrality in almost all of Asia and much of central Europe, Lippmann said, which we have the power to support and which it would be in our best interest to encourage.

Israeli Immigration Subject of Discussion

Mollohan Nomination As Marshal Approved

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved and sent to the Senate floor the nomination of Robert H. Mollohan, chief clerk of the Senate District Committee, to be U. S. Marshal for the Northern District of West Virginia.

Mollohan was appointed to his present post by Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) of the Senate District Committee, last October. Mollohan's successor to the local committee is expected to be named within the next few days.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP).—Grains made a nice recovery from early weakness today, ending with small-sized gains. Final prices were up about 1 to 2 cents from the day's lows and fractionally above last week's finish.

In part the recovery could be attributed to short-covering, traders said. Except in wheat, the market has been weak for the past several sessions and those who were on the bear side before the slump started undoubtedly had profits.

Before the rally got under way all rye deliveries, September and December corn, and November soybeans made new lows.

Wheat ended ⅛ lower to ⅜ higher, corn was ¾-⅞ higher, oats were ⅛-⅜ higher, rye was ¼ to 1 cent higher, soybeans were ½-1¼ higher and lard was 2 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Battle School Bill Given to Assembly

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—An administration bill to provide 45 million dollars in grants to localities for school construction was introduced simultaneously today in the Virginia Senate and House of Delegates.

The bill would carry out the major campaign promise of Gov. John S. Battle.

It would make thirty million dollars available upon passage as an emergency measure and provide that 15 million dollars more would be released during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1951.

The share of each county and city would be "in the same ratio which the active school enrollment therein bears to the total school enrollment in the State."

It also provides that 10 percent of each of the two sums—less such amount as is expended for the development of vocational education facilities—would constitute an equalization fund for localities "where the need is greater and in which a reasonable effort has been made by the local authorities to meet their own needs."

To qualify for money under the equalization fund, the localities must satisfy the State Board of Education that:

"They have projected a well-planned school building construction program through June 30, 1954 . . . that they are expending, or have expended, from local sources for current school operation, exclusive of capital outlay and debt service, an amount equivalent to a tax levy of 70 cents per $100 of true valuation or locally taxed wealth within such counties or cities as determined by the State Department of Education."

Two Drivers Unhurt as Trucks Crash

Two truck drivers escaped injury yesterday in a spectacular accident in Alexandria. The crash sent one of the trucks through a heavy guard rail and the other over a bridge abutment to shed three of its wheels and a half a load of hot asphalt.

One of the trucks wound up on its side, hanging on a lip of ground above the waters of Four Mile Run after going down a 10-foot bank.

George Moore, 26, operator of a radio repair shop at 2222 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, driver of one of the trucks, was given a summons on a reckless driving charge for appearance in Alexandria Civil and Police Court at 10 a. m. January 31.

Police said his panel truck made a turn from a cloverleaf at Shirley hwy., near Four Mile Run, and collided with the asphalt truck driven by James E. Ramey, 26, of 731 N. Tazewell st., Arlington. Both drivers climbed out unhurt.

Moore's truck, police said, went through a heavy timber guard rail between two bridges, and overturned.

Ramey told police he pointed his truck for the bridge abutment to avoid collision with still another car. The asphalt truck climbed the abutment, police said, and came to rest in another highway lane, minus three of its wheels and half its load of hot asphalt, which was strewn on the pavement.

Profit Sets Policy, Club Says

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was told yesterday a "supper club" would sacrifice its license rather than give up its policy of nondiscrimination.

Four Citizens' Association spokesmen and four individuals had protested against renewal of the license of the Dixie Supper Club, located at 3528 14th st. nw., in the Cavalier Apartments building, at yesterday's continued hearing before the ABC Board.

A resolution of the Arkansas Avenue Community Citizen Association declared the restaurant owners were "attempting to make a night club for guests of mixed races."

The Petworth Citizens Association objected to the "proposed use of the premises for a Negro supper club," which its resolution said, "would tend to promote disorder and possibly lead to violence."

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association and the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights also objected to the type of patronage of the "supper club."

Four tenants of the Cavalier Apartments said they were subjected to noise and other disturbances from the place.

But Raymond Godbersen, attorney for the licensee, Bob White's, Inc., said both white and Negro patronage was necessary in order to make a profit and stay in business.

Mrs. Agnes K. Mason and James O. Moran of the ABC Board took the case under advisement.

Politics Charged as Koontz Is Indorsed for Sousa Post

the support of Adelbert W. Lee, chairman of the board's personnel committee, who led the fight against Miss McAuliffe's appointment.

The 80 persons who met in the Southeast's Ryland Methodist Church declared that Koontz, now assistant principal of the Kramer Junior High School, "has the respect and admiration of both the students and adults of the Southeast section.

The resolution was adopted after debate resulted in the defeat of a substitute motion which would have kept the group from indorsing any particular candidate.

W. J. Smith, vice president of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, said that the meeting was called at the request of a number of Southeast residents "to take action to support Koontz."

Smith presided and introduced the resolution that was adopted. He said that about 30 Southeast civic and parent-teacher groups had been asked to participate.

The meeting split into two factions immediately after Smith introduced the resolution.

Mrs. Mabel Morris, a teacher at George Washington University and a representative of the Fort Davis Citizens Association, said that she joined with Smith in calling the meeting but reconsidered. She urged the group not to go on record as favoring any one particular candidate but urging the school board to pick the best candidate.

She was supported by Louis Nemzer, representing the Anne Beers Parent-Teacher Association, who declared the meeting "political."

Representative Victor Wickersham (D., Okla.) said the Anacostia Home and School Association, of which he is president, unanimously favors Koontz.

"We on this side of the street need someone to put us on the map," he said in declaring that the section east of the Anacostia River doesn't get as much consideration as the Northwest.

H. A. Nessen, vice president of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association, said statistics were juggled by Dr. Corning to support the view that Miss McAuliffe is the best qualified candidate for the post.

He referred to Dr. Corning's official record to the Board of Education which showed Miss McAuliffe has the highest rating of three candidates considered for the job.

"Koontz's record over a five-year period exceeds that of any candidate," Nessen said.

Nessen was one of a five-man committee appointed by Smith to deliver the resolution to Dr. Corning.

The statement criticized school officials for waiting "little more than two weeks" before opening of the Sousa School to consider a principal.

It also indorsed the right of members of the school board to override the superintendent's recommendation for an appointment and said that the present controversy over Miss McAuliffe has "made untenable the position" of any candidate other than Koontz.

Earlier in the day Dr. Corning said he had no statement as yet on whether he will resubmit the name of Miss McAuliffe, sister of Maj. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe of Bastogne fame, again before the Board of Education.

3500 at Thomas Travelogue

Nearly 3500 persons last night attended a globe-girdling motion travelogue presented by the Lowell Thomases, senior and junior, in Constitution Hall.

It was the largest audience yet to attend a program in the Washington Town Hall series produced by Karla Hall.

Though it was the first public appearance by Thomas, sr., since his return from Tibet, he did not discuss the expedition. Thomas, who suffered a hip injury in a fall from a mule in a Himalayan pass, appeared on crutches.

The motion pictures shown were made on earlier trips by Thomas and his son, who alternately supplied running comment, and concluded with shots of the Bikini atom bomb tests.

The next program of the series will be given at 8:30 Monday night. Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) will preside at a forum discussion.

Price Spread on Eggs Is Hit By House Members at Hearing dropped 23 percent in two years. By contrast, he said, "prices paid by farmers have come down less than 4 percent since the peak in September 1948.)

Aiken said eggs are not bringing the cost of production. A witness, Roy W. Lennartson, of the Agriculture Department poultry branch, said that broilers also are in the same position.

A lot of the farmers' troubles with egg prices, Lennartson said, are due to the gentle winter. Hens lay more during warm weather. Also, more pullets were hatched last year. Instead of an expected increase in eggs of 6 percent, there has been a 12 percent jump.

Senator J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.) from Delmarva Peninsula—the Eastern Shore—showed a chart of what is happening in his chicken-raising area.

"This shows," said Aiken, "that during one two-week period, the price of broilers went down 30 percent for the farmer, the wholesale price went down 17½ percent, but the retail price went down only 4½ percent."

Two alternatives were suggested by Lennartson. Either the farmers must raise fewer chickens and eggs, or the public must eat more.

To accomplish both, he said, the Government is reducing price supports far below last year, and is carrying on eat more chicken campaigns. This week, he said, is "Frying Chicken Week."

Court Upholds FCC Denial Of Radio License to 2 Papers opinion since appointment to the bench last fall.

Washington said FCC had acted "fully within" its jurisdiction and he rejected the paper's contention that the FCC finding was equivalent to conviction of a crime without a trial.

He also rejected a contention that the license denial was an invasion of the freedom of the press, guaranteed in the first amendment to the Constitution. Wrote Washington:

"Just as the first amendment does not provide the press with immunity from the commands of the antitrust laws, so a newspaper, when it stands as an applicant for a radio license, may not rely on the first amendment to compel the FCC to disregard public interest in considering its application. . . .

"The commission did not, in any manner, attempt to censor the editorial policy of the newspaper. Its order does not require Mansfield to cease from any of the practices engaged in. . . . The mandate of the first amendment does not preclude the commission from considering the competitive practices of appellant. Only by keeping the dissemination of news free from monopoly can the constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press ever be fully achieved."

Atom Talk Slated

Truman, Rayburn Hope For Aid-to-Korea Bill

Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) said yesterday he thinks there is a good chance the House will yet vote more economic aid for South Korea despite its one-vote rejection of a 60-million-dollar aid bill last week.

President Truman already has announced he will ask for "speedy rectification" of that vote. He also has gotten an unexpected ally in Senator Taft (R., Ohio) who said he believed some continued economic help should be provided.

Rayburn talked over the situation with the President at the White House yesterday. He told reporters he thought the House could take another vote by bringing up a Korean aid bill passed by the Senate. It is similar to the one the House turned down.

Redskins Grouped With Giants, Eagles, Browns

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Bill Dudley, a coy one with a football under his arm, is playing it just as cozily at the news he is now the property of the Redskins. Pending his across-the-table salary talks with the Washington team, Dudley is yielding nothing in his bargaining position in his first comments at his winter home in Lynchburg, Va.

"The next move is up to the Redskins," Dudley was saying, "and I am not certain I will play pro football next fall." And then he added, "I have several attractive business offers under consideration and I may not be playing ball."

POVICH

It is not the reaction of a fellow ready to rush into the Redskins' camp at their first offer. Dudley has always placed a high value on his services, and wangles very well. When he consented to join the Detroit Lions in 1947 after being traded by Pittsburgh, he was finally appeased by a three-year contract at $20,000 per season.

One of the reasons Detroit traded Dudley to the Redskins the other day was because his salary load was getting too heavy. Under their agreement, they could cut him back to $7000 a year as a backfield coach at the end of three seasons, but for that they surmised Dudley would not hold still.

THERE WAS some disbelief among Detroit fans, anyway, at the news Bullet Bill had been traded for the Redskins' Dan Sandifer who is a flash-in-the-pan compared to the consistent heroics of Dudley in his six years of pro football. But the fact is, even as Dudley was in the late Jock Sutherland's doghouse at Pittsburgh, he was not hitting it off with Lion Coach Bo McMillin.

At Pittsburgh, Sutherland had found Dudley "too bossy" with the Steelers' assistant coaches and some of his teammates. When he traded Bullet Bill to Detroit, Sutherland declared, "I know for a fact some of our boys would not have returned to the team this year if Bill were back with us."

Asked later about how he believed Dudley would fare with the Lions, Sutherland delivered the supreme cut. "Well, Detroit has itself another coach," he said.

Sutherland's charges against Dudley were never substantiated and Dudley's friends always did say the Steelers' coach mistook Bullet Bill's fierce zeal and desire to win for an attempt to take over the coaching prerogatives.

WHEN LAST SEEN with the Lions, Dudley was still the hottest article on the team. He was their top ball-carrier, best pass catcher, did the punting and the placement kicking, but apparently Coach McMillin didn't think he was giving the club $20,000 worth.

Dudley always has been perhaps the most fantastic player in the pro league. By his own admission, he was too small at 170 pounds to have any business mixing it with the bruisers. He wasn't fast, he wasn't a fellow with power or leg drive, he did the Steelers' passing with what is derogatively described as a candy arm, and he was not transcendent in any single item.

Yet when they put him all together, Dudley was the finest player in the league for a period of years. After the 1946 season, he was officially voted The Most Valuable, a shocking come-uppance to the Associated Press which had not placed Dudley on its all-pro team of that year. It prompted the crack that the world's greatest newsgathering organization must have been otherwise occupied during that season to miss the fact that Dudley had led the league in yards gained and passes intercepted while operating with one of the weakest teams in it.

LACKING SPEED and drive, Bullet Bill was not without his assets, however. When he did grab that leather loaf, he could show the most baffling change of pace since Red Grange. And nobody used his blockers with the same effects as Dudley. It was not uncommon to see him calmly shake off one tackler while at the same time yelling and pointing to his blockers what he wanted from 'em further down field.

The Redskins met up with Dudley of the Steelers early in his pro career. They made the mistake of throwing a pass in his territory, and 94 yards later Dudley wiped out their 7-0 lead and scored the tying touchdown that led to a 17-14 Steeler victory in 1942.

After getting that touchdown, Dudley took a punt back for another one, in a second long run. He put on a tremendous show and in the final minutes Sutherland took him out for a well-deserved rest with the Steelers in front by three points. His rest was brief. Sammy Baugh took the Redskins deep into Steeler territory, and Sutherland had to move Dudley back into the game again. Because, you see, Bullet Bill was also the best defensive man on his club.

Pro Draft Proves

Backs Get the Headlines But Linemen Get the Votes

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

OF THE FIRST 300 college players drafted by the 13 National American Football League teams, 121 were backs and 179 linemen . . . The San Francisco 49'ers claimed the largest number of linemen, 18, while the Chicago Bears made a bid for the most backs, 13 . . . It's interesting to note that the Redskins themselves admitted that they've been sad sacks on defense. They claimed 16 linemen in their first 25 draft choices . . . Tiger Joe Marsh, who does an occasional wrestling stint at Turner's Arena, wires that fans who can't wait for his next mat appearance can truck down to the theater and catch him on the screen—as the court bailiff in the current flicker, "Pinky."

IN ADDRESSING the Touchdown Club yesterday, Senator Russell Long of Louisiana, recalled the halcyon days of L.S.U. football when his father, the late Senator Huey Long, was Louisiana's "Kingfish" . . . The young Senator told several stories connected with his dad's regime, but omitted the best—the time when Long threatened to hike tax rates of a railroad when it refused to transport L. S. U. students from Baton Rouge to Nashville for an L. S. U.-Vanderbilt game for $4 round trip . . . When the railroad learned Long's proposed tax increases would amount to more than two million dollars, it readily agreed to reduce fare from $5 to $4 for L. S. U. students.

Haas Wins With 65-268; Other Top Pros Falter

By Bob Myers

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 23 (AP). Fred Haas, jr., exploded a six under par 65 that brought him victory in the $10,000 Long Beach Open today with a 72-hole score of 268.

The 34-year-old New Orleans professional captured the $2000 top prize in smashing fashion, crushing the chances of his closest rival, veteran Stan Leonard of Vancouver, B. C., in the duel down the stretch.

Leaving such distinguished stars as Sam Snead, National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff, Jimmy Demaret and others to languish in the disappointing shade of the also-rans, the New Orleans stylist ended the tournament 16 strokes under par for the complete distance.

Leonard Second

Runner-up honors went to Leonard, who fired a 69 but wound up at 273, five shots back of the flying Haas.

Haas, 1937 National Intercollegiate champion for Louisiana State and a leading amateur in the South in the 1930s, shot one of his finest tournaments since turning pro in 1946. He had rounds of 70-66-67-65 for his 268. Leonard had round of 71-66-67-69—273.

Tied at 274 were Middlecoff wih a 70 today and Al Brosch of Garden City, N. Y., a newcomer out here, with a 67 today.

Three contestants were grouped at 275—former PGA Champion Jim Ferrier 71, former United States Public Links Champion Smiley Quick 71, and Marty Furgol, Albuquerque, 69.

Jimmy Demaret, whose 72-hole score of 272 tied for the lead with Ben Hogan in Long Beach's initial big time show last year, shot his second 71 in a row and finished 10 strokes beak of Haas at 278.

Sam Snead, the pretournament favorite, fired a three under par 68 but lost his chance of winning the event with a total of 277. His previous rounds were 68—70—71.

Today's final thrust began with Haas holding a slim one stroke lead over Leonard, Middlecoff and Quick.

Middlecoff soon dropped from the title picture, leaving Haas and his two rivals playing in the final threesome of the day. Quick bowed out, too.

Haas Putts Them Cross-Handed

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 23 (AP). Fred Haas, jr., who won the Long Beach Open golf tournament today, did it with a cross-handed putt.

"I switched in the middle of the Tam O'Shanter tourney last year," Haas explained. "I think it's done my game a lot of good."

Unlike conventional right-handers, Haas' left hand is lower than his right on the shaft. He says it keeps his wrists from breaking when he putts, thus gives him a truer touch.

Maxim Plays Cards, Mills Writes Poetry on Eve of Bout

London, Jan. 23 (AP).—Challenger Joey Maxim of Cleveland played pinochle and Champion Freddie Mills of England wrote poetry today as they awaited tomorrow night's 15-round world heavyweight title bout at Earl's Court.

In between bids, melds and cashing tricks, 27-year-old Maxim opined he was more confident of beating Mills than in breaking even in his card game with Manager Jack Kearns and Trainer Al Del Monte.

"These boys are tough," said Maxim, his big hands shuffling the deck of cards. "I hear Mills is pretty tough too, but from what they say, he doesn't cover up so well. Maybe he figures I can't hit. And maybe he's wrong, too," he added with a grin.

"He's plenty wrong," Del Monte reassured.

Meanwhile, 26 miles from London, at a country pub called "Barley Mow," Mills gazed at a red, white and blue horseshoe which bore the inscription, "Keep the title in Britain."

"I'm going to do it, too," the champion declared confidently, "and I'm going to win in less than 15 rounds."

Mills, 30, won the title from Gus Lesnevich of Cliffside Park, N. J., in London in July of 1948.

A stroll last night inspired Mills to write a poem which he entitled "The Signposts to London."

"Hank mentioned Wight (a 15-game winner for the Sox last season) as a good trade for Vernon, and I said no," Lane reported.

[At College Park, Cudmore said he was invited to Stetson to "look over the place" early this month, but that he has not had definite word from authorities of the school.—Editor's note.]

Thomas held a slight edge in the first three rounds, but Dynamite came on late with a blistering rally to tuck away the verdict.

Gene Smith, 121, Washington, gained a second round TKO over Jerry Cortwright, 120, of New York in a sheduled eight.

Smith had Cortwright down three times in the first round and twice in the second before the bout was stopped.

When Bell Tolls, Pros All Listen

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

FOOTBALL Commissioner Bert Bell is in the enviable position of telling off the boss—and staying on the payroll.

At the Philadelphia sessions, Bell definitely has emerged as the strong man of the New National-American League. And the consensus is that it's a good thing for pro football.

When it appeared obvious that 11 clubowners, the required majority, never would agree on the complicated player draft problem, Bell stepped in. He solved it in two hours after the owners failed to get together in 72.

Bell didn't have to settle the makeup of the divisions yesterday. All he had to do was threaten to act. That did it. And the owners agreed on the alignment that Bell was going to recommend anyway.

The commissioner's power comes right from the league constitution. When the clubowners fail to agree, Bell makes the decisions. And there is no appeal.

Thus, Bell doesn't have to be a figurehead. That's no role for the pudgy, forthright Philadelphian.

Bert's been a two-fisted fighter since his college football days at Penn. He's been in the pro game since 1933 as coach, owner and commissioner, and knows as much about every phase of it as any one man. And he's never reluctant to express his opinion.

FUNNY THING about the guy now cracking the knuckles of 13 clubowners, he never was a financially successful one himself. Bell came into pro football in 1933 with the Frankford Yellowjackets. He and his associates made it the first Philadelphia Eagles. Bell was coach and just about everything else.

That was back in less palmy days when the Eagles played in massive Municipal Stadium before crowds of less than 5000. Bell even used to admit kids for a penny, too, if accompanied by an adult.

The game grew and Bell grew with it. Asked if he ever made any money, he readily admitted that he hadn't. Bell added, shrewdly, "But I never lost any, either."

Bell sold out his interest in 1940 and continued as co-owner with Art Rooney of the Pittsburgh Steelers. Then in 1946 he took over as commissioner of the National Football League.

In its last year, and that was last year, Bell received a 10-year contract at $30,000 per year. The new league hasn't acted yet on this little problem.

Bell, who'll be 56 next month, began a leadership career early. At exclusive Haverford School on Philadelphia's Main Line, he was captain of the football, basketball and baseball teams.

AS A BRAINY quarterback, he captained Penn's 1919 team. That was after wartime service with the 20th General Field Hospital. After graduation, he was an assistant coach at Penn and Temple.

Bell is married to the former Frances Upton, musical comedy star. They have three children.

At one point in his career Bert was asked to run for mayor of Philadelphia. His reply, "I'm sorry, I can't kiss babies."

It's more down his alley to boss 13 highly individualistic club owners.

Marshall Votes 'No' as 12 Agree on 2 Divisions

Philadelphia, Jan. 23 (AP).—Pro football put its house in order today by deciding the makeup of the two divisions of the National-American Football League on the votes of 12 of the 13 members.

Acting quickly when Commissioner Bell threatened to take the problem into his own hands, the owners lined up two divisions like this:

DIVISION 1	DIVISION 2
Washington	Chicago Bears
Cleveland	Los Angeles
N. Y. Giants	San Francisco
Philadelphia	Detroit
Chicago Cardinals	New York Bulldogs
Pittsburgh	Green Bay

Baltimore (swing team)

It will be determined later in which division Baltimore will be listed but it is definite that the Colts will play each of the 12 other clubs.

Washington was the only club voting against the motion by George Halas, president of the Chicago Bears, to set up the two divisions. George Preston Marshall, owner of the Redskins, was not present, leaving his Proxy with Commissioner Bell. Marshall left the room shortly before the ballot was taken.

Marshall opposed the arrangement because it did not specify which division Baltimore would be in. He insisted the Colts must be in a different section from his Redskins. Marshall does not want to have the Colts and Redskins playing the same teams at home.

(Coach Herman Ball said last night the Washington club objected to Baltimore being the swing team because it eliminates games between the two on a home-and-home basis.

(The Redskins, grouping Baltimore and Washington, felt the swing club should be from a one-team city).

Each team will play 12 games probably on a schedule that will call for five home-and-home series with each team in its own division, one game with a "rival" from the other section and one game with the swing team.

Bell will iron out the schedule problems in private. He indicated a schedule would not be announced for several days.

Under the terms of the December 9 merger agreement between the National League and the All-America Conference, the two divisions were to be known as the National and American. It is likely that the group, including Green Bay, will be the National and the division with Cleveland will be the American.

Emil R. Fischer of Green Bay was named, previously, president of the National, and Daniel Sherby of Cleveland head of the American division.

Announcement of the final divisional setup caused little surprise. The merger pact specified that the two New York teams and the two Chicago teams could not be placed in the same group. It also set up Baltimore as the swing team.

Much of the argument that consumed hour after hour of the five-day meetings hinged on the swing team. Several million words later the owners arrived right back where they started—with Baltimore.

Division 1., including both Cleveland, the All-America champs, and the Philadelphia Eagles, National League kings, virtually guaranteed a series between these two

Maranville Gives Lowdown on 1914 Braves

Boston Came From Last to Win by 10½, Then Swept Series From Famed A's

By Joe Reichler

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—"It was my greatest thrill," said peppery little Rabbit Maranville today in recalling the Boston Braves' unbelievable pennant and World Series triumph of 1914.

"We did something nobody ever believed possible. Gamblers were laying 100 to 1 against us on opening day, with hardly any takers. They raised the odds to 1000 to 1 after the first month. By July 4, after we had been in the cellar all but three days, you could have gotten a million to one."

This "million to one" comeback of George Stallings' wonder team is hailed as the half-century's greatest sports upset by sports writers and sportscasters participating in the Associated Press poll.

On July 19, the Braves were running a sorry last in the National League, 11½ games behind the leading New York Giants. The next day, after being in the cellar for 97 of the season's first 100 days, the Braves emerged from the dungeon and started rolling.

Less than two months later, on September 8, they took over first place and then went on to win the National flag by 10½ games. It was the Boston National League team's first pennant. In the preceding 11 years, the Braves were strictly a second division club.

But, just as astonishingly, they brushed off the famed Philadelphia Athletics—with their $100,000 infield of Home Run Baker, Jack Barry, Eddie Collins and Stuffy McInnis—in four straight games in the World Series.

By a margin of 128 to 53, sports writers and sportscasters acclaimed this the greatest surprise of the first 50 years of the twentieth century.

It won over such fabled upsets as Gene Tunney's victory over Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey in 1926 and Centre College's 6-0 triumph over Harvard in 1921.

The 5-foot-5 Maranville, one of the best little men, together with Outfielder Joe Connolly, Catcher Hank Gowdy and Second Baseman Johnny Evers, formed the backbone of the 1914 miracle Braves. The team boasted three terrific pitchers in Dick Rudolph, Lefty George Tyler and Bill James.

After winning 48 of the last 68 games with Rudolph, Tyler and James working in all but the last few, the trio stopped the Athletics' sluggers cold with exactly six runs in the four-game series, one going 12 innings.

What happened to the Braves to change them from a door-mat for other clubs to a fighting, hustling ball club that knocked off everything in sight?

"It's difficult to explain the sudden change," Maranville said, "but I think Stallings, our manager, was mostly responsible.

"It was a day early in July and we were on our way to Chicago for a four-game series with the Cubs," Maranville related. "We had just played an exhibition game up in Toronto and the local club there shellacked us 15-3.

"Stallings watched us troop in to the station and in a tone that dripped with disgust spat out, 'Big league ball players, you call yourselves, eh! You're not even Grade A sandlotters. I'm ashamed of you all.'

"It was a terrible thing to say to us. The words bit deeply into us. Nobody said anything but we were hurt. We vowed then and there we'd show up Stallings. We were still ripping mad when we arrived in Chicago and proceeded to tear the Cubs apart four in a row.

"When we got to St. Louis, the papers greeted our arrival with the headlines: 'Cards to use lowly Braves as stepping stones to first place.' St. Louis was only a half game behind the league-leading Giants at the time.

"Well, we took four straight from them. Then came three out of four in Cincinnati and a sweep of four games in Pittsburgh, and there we were on the league leaders. There was no stopping us after that. We won something like 35 of 38. We copped the flag by 10½ games.

Going Fishing?

25 Million U. S. Anglers, '49 Estimate

By Ralph Murdock

FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE has just released its compilation of the number of fishing licenses sold in the 48 States.

Murdock

The year 1949 shows approximately a 10 percent increase and divulges the fact that 15,478,570 licenses were purchased at the record-breaking sum of $32,657,940. The increase was 1,400,609 over the previous year.

The State of California alone received $3,138,501 in revenue from the anglers who fished its waters, while Michigan led the league in number of licenses issued when 1,110,109 residents and nonresidents applied for their permits. Maryland finished forty-fourth in the number of licenses sold to inhabitants of the Free State. (However, no licenses are required for salt water fishing).

The above 15½ million anglers who purchased fishing licenses represent only about one half of the anglers in the entire Nation. Some States do not require licenses for land owners, youngsters under 16 years of age and fishermen who indulge in the sport after they have reached the age of 65. Another group is the salt water anglers who fish in the tidal waters without a permit. It is estimated that there are six million in this category.

Figuratively speaking, 25 million anglers enjoy the sport of fishing in the good old U. S. A. Assuming that the population is 150,000,000, it is evident that one out of every six Americans is piscatorially inclined. Hence, the big question arises, "Which would you rather do—or go fishing?" Fellas, you don't have a choice, you simply end up by "going fishing."

IN FEBRUARY'S ISSUE of Hunting and Fishing magazine is an editorial by Tom McHugh which will make the hair of a bald-headed "ducker" stand on end. It depicts where as many as 2400 old-squaws (not female Indians, but wild ducks) in a single day have been caught in the gill nets of a commercial fishery on Lake Michigan. Believe it or not, a total of 27,000 ducks were unavoidably nabbed in a single year by the same fishery.

"The annual loss of old-squaws through accidental netting is tremendous and vastly exceeds the number killed by hunters," is the opinion of Dr. A. W. Schorger, who has done considerable research on the problem. The nets in Lake Michigan, some of which were 8000 feet long, were set for lake trout and whitefish.

The thousands of old-squaws in Chesapeake Bay seldom come in close to shore and naturally fare much better. It is almost impossible for this species to get caught in a pound net but they are strickly ducksoup for the gill nets. They are notorious for their diving abilities and feed mostly on muscles, blisters and growths on oysters. They are known to feed in water from 50 to 100 feet deep.

Honeys Gal Wins by 1½ Lengths for 3d in Row at Hialeah

Growing Up, Top Choice, Runs Third

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP).—Honeys Gal, owned by F. Eugene Dixon, jr., of Elkins Park, Pa., kept her slate intact as she defeated six other 3-year-old fillies in the featured sixth race at Hialeah Park today, the Tangerine Purse.

The daughter of Eight Thirty-Miel came on when put to the test to beat J. C. Hauer's Ari's Mona by a length and a half in the fast time of 1:11 3/5 for the six furlongs.

She paid $8.20 and made her score here three out of three. Dickey Stable's Growing Up was third, with Mrs. H. A. Campbell's Wiley Fox fourth.

The defeat of Growing Up marked the sixth straight setback of the day for form players and extended the unimposing score of beaten choices to 42 out of 48 races since the meeting opened.

Dear Folks:

Trainers occasionally are successful with horses picked up cheap. Hugh Dufford is an exception. He took Gold Foam, costing $900, and made him among other things, a Travers Stakes winner. Scintillator, purchased for $800, won nine races as a 2-year-old, topping off that performance by winning The Juvenile at Belmont Park. He made a star of Torchlight, an $1100 buy and tutored Chaps ($700) when he beat The Chief and Dauber in several stakes. Cockrill ($3000) won The Juvenile, Sagamore and Pimlico Nursery under Duf ord's handling. He now has a brown-coated son of War Admiral in his charge which cost $11,000. The youngster is at Gulfstream Park awaiting the March 4 opening. It will be interesting to see if Dufford can be succesful with a relatively high-priced colt.—Bill.

D. C. Girl Will Skate In Moscow

Colorado Springs, Colo., Jan. 23 (AP).—Andra McLaughlin, 16-year-old Colorado Springs figure and speed skating star, will become the first American girl ever to appear in the world's speed skating competition when the events are held at Moscow February 11 and 12.

The appearance of Miss McLaughlin, daughter of Charles McLaughlin, Washington, D. C., engineering official, will mark the first time that a United States skater has appeared in the Russian capital.

She will also skate at London's Wembley Stadium for the world's figure skating championship. The London events will be March 13 and 16.

Arrangements for her appearance at Moscow were completed over the weekend by her father.

She is holder of the North American and United States junior girls' speed skating championships, and has been a strong contender for similar honors in figure skating.

great clubs. That's one thing the fans have been asking for.

Putting Los Angeles Rams and the San Francisco Forty-Niners in the same division made it possible for a visiting team to play both teams on a two-week swing of the far West, thus cutting travel costs.

The weary owners waged a long word-battle before Bell strode out of the closed meeting with his welcome announcement. A half hour earlier he came out to inform the press that a decision was near.

"They couldn't come to an agreement after arguing all afternoon," he said after disclosing the division lineup. "So I told them I was going to make up the divisions myself.

"At that point, Halas made a motion for the divisional breakdown that was finally accepted. Halas' motion was seconded by Jack Mara," (president of the Giants).

The portly commissioner, shirt-sleeved and dead tired, said the divisions would be permanent unless the 1950 competition disclosed "gross inequities."

It was a most important decision to the new league—a decision that seemed impossible until Bell waved his gavel and threatened direct action. From all indications the owners would have been in conference, arguing until next week, if Bell hadn't called a halt.

To set up the two divisions a vote of 11 of the 13 clubs was needed. If they couldn't agree the commissioner was to decide.

The league schedule probably will open Sunday, September 17, running 13 weeks. One club will be idle each Sunday. According to the merger agreement, no exhibitions are allowed between teams in the same division.

Before the owners settled their division problem, they worked over the playing rule changes proposed by the coaches.

By a unanimous vote they decided to make permanent the unlimited free substitution rule. It was adopted last year on a one-year trial basis.

Proposals to bar megaphone coaching from the bench and restriction on the "tackle eligible" play failed.

Bell said he would ban the megaphone coaching if it became a "nuisance." He also instructed officials to call penalties when there is a doubt about the proper line-up.

Under the "tackle eligible" play, the end drops back and a tackle becomes eligible to receive a pass. Los Angeles and the Chicago Bears used this play effectively last season. It caused no end of confusion among officials and opposing players because the end who dropped back often would appear to be on the line of scrimmage.

Six minor changes approved included a ban on forfeits by officials. The officials were ordered to continue play, despite any complications. In the past the official could forfeit the game if a team didn't start play within two minutes after ordered to do so.

It was understood that Rizzuto and Reynolds received increases over their 1949 salaries which was believed to have been in the neighborhood of $20,000 each.

Octave Group Offers Prayer For Apostates

Prayers for the return to the sacraments of lapsed Roman Catholics were offered last night at the Chair of Unity Octave service at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

The Octave, which began January 18, will end Wednesday night, the feast of the conversion of St. Paul. Prayers for the conversion of the Jews will be offered at the service at 8 p. m. today, and for the missionary conquest of the world at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

"The lapsed Catholic has wrenched himself away from the love of Christ because he loved all too humanly," the Right Rev. Msgr. James H. O'Neil, deputy chief of the Army Chaplains Corps, declared last night.

"We must pray, work and sacrifice and be hopeful that some smoldering spark of faith may yet be rekindled," he said.

He urged Catholics to "use every opportunity to remind them of the spiritual joys in which they no longer share."

Churches Told To Help With Race Relations

Columbus, O., January 23 (AP). A prominent Protestant minister called today for church leadership in the fields of race relations and "tensions between labor and management."

The Very Rev. Sidney E. Sweet, dean of Christ Cathedral (Episcopal) at St. Louis, spoke at the National Convention on the City Church attended by delegates of 31 Protestant denominations, representing 30 million members.

The convocation is sponsored by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Home Missions Council and the International Council of Religious Education.

"No one should join a Christian church who is not willing to live beside people of other nations and races in the spirit of Christian brotherhood," Dean Sweet said.

He declared these fundamental Christian principles must be upheld, "even if it costs us popularity and income."

A Chinese minister cited the need for fewer but stronger Chinese in this country.

The Rev. Ching Chong Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church in Washington, D. C., said 40 Christian churches, all struggling for survival, serve some 3000 Chinese.

Drug Prolongs Life in Severe Cancer Cases

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The American Cancer Society today announced a drug treatment for cancer that it said has kept a few persons comfortable and productive for four years. All had been given only a few months to live.

The treatment is a polysaccharide, a complex form of sugar, obtained from germs known as bacillus prodigiosus. The announcement was credited to Dr. Hugh J. Creech, of the Institute for Cancer Research, Philadelphia, which has been working for four years on this cancer sugar.

"More than 130 far-advanced cancer patients have been treated," said today's announcement. "None is considered permanently cured. Most of them seemed to receive at least slight benefit. Between 20 and 30 percent were helped in one or more of several ways—tumors shrank, pain disappeared, weight increased, appetite returned, more or less normal activity was resumed and there was a sense of well-being."

Dr. Creech said "about 25" of the persons treated are still alive "and these people are just being held temporarily. They might live another month, six months or even two years. The growth was halted only temporarily."

The researcher insisted the treatment is "not a cure."

What this sugar treatment will lead to was not predicted, but Dr. Creech said there is enough encouragement to work on these sugars for at least 10 years.

Similar sugars were at the base of the famous Coley's fluid, which years ago was said to have caused some sensational cancer cures. The fluid was abandoned when the medical profession was unable to get consistently good results.

The bacteria sugars are very poisonous.

JUNIPER-TAR COMPOUND Over 50 years in use

An International Affair, BUT MORE SO, A NATIONAL MATTER

Since the attacks upon our Company's American flag vessels while lawfully engaged in maintaining our traditional American trade with China, and in view of the international and country-wide comment on the matter, pro and con, as well as the very numerous expressions of interest we have received—we now consider it right to summarize our position—a position that has so far been variously dealt with here and abroad.

1 The cargo liners of our firm are not newcomers in the Orient. In addition to our regular services in several other directions, our China calls are part of a scheduled round-the-world service in which our vessels leave the United States via Suez and return again to the United States west coast, thence via the Panama Canal to this coast. Our vessels leave the United States in this service every second Thursday.

THE ABOVE FACTS ANSWER WHAT MAY BE IN THE MIND OF SOME, I.E., THAT WE ARE OPPORTUNISTS FISHING IN TROUBLED WATERS ONLY FOR WHAT WE CAN GET OUT OF IT MOMENTARILY.

We have always had the right to sail our ships into any port in the world, including the port of Shanghai, and that RIGHT heretofore always has been firmly upheld by our own United States Government and never questioned with impunity by any other nation.

2 Cargo, passengers and mail are taken on and discharged in this world-round service in twenty-two different ports enroute; They are: Norfolk, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Alexandria, Karachi, Bombay, Colombo, Singapore, Djakarta, Cebu, Ilo Ilo, Manila, Hongkong, Shanghai, Taku Bar, Fusan, Kobe, Nagoya, Yokohama, San Francisco and Panama.

To by-pass any of these regularly scheduled ports is impractical, except if arranged for a very long time ahead, because we are commited to our schedules for a long time in advance. The receipts (Bills of Lading) we give for goods and mail to be transported by our Company as a common carrier contain exceptions for giving service but only for valid reasons.

WE CANNOT WITH IMPUNITY DUMP GOODS ENTRUSTED TO US FOR TRANSPORTATION ANYWHERE AS MAY SUIT OUR PARTICULAR CONVENIENCE BUT, LIKE THE UNITED STATES MAILS, THE GOODS MUST, OR SHOULD, GO THROUGH IRRESPECTIVE OF OBSTACLES. IF WE WERE TO PAY HEED TO EVERY RUMOR AND REPORT OF DANGER OR HINDRANCE WHICH WE MIGHT OR COULD ENCOUNTER IN THE COUNTRIES WHERE WE CALL, WE WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO DO BUSINESS OR KEEP OUR CONTRACTS TO CARRY FREIGHT TO PORTS ON OUR SCHEDULES. A BUSINESS CANNOT BE RUN ON RUMOR. THIS HAS REFERENCE TO OUR INSISTENCE UPON COMPLETING OUR CHINA CALLS.

3 This service is conducted for profit and to give a living and a way of life to many hundreds of Americans, both in the United States and in ports along the line, as well as to the American personnel aboard the vessels. The service takes care of thousands of American firms and factories.

SOME COMMENTATORS APPARENTLY CONSIDER THE PROFIT MOTIVE AS NO LONGER EXISTING IN THIS COUNTRY AND THAT THE PROFIT INCENTIVE (WHEN IT IS SOMEONE ELSE'S) IS SORDID. OUR NATION HAS BUILT UP AND PROSPERED UNDER THAT PROFIT SYSTEM—WE ARE NOT CALLED UPON TO DEFEND IT, FOR IT NEEDS NO DEFENSE.

4 Prior to the scheduled arrival of our vessels at Shanghai, we consulted with the Department of State in reference to a reported "blockade" of that Port, announced on June 20, 1949, by the Chinese Nationalists. The Secretary of State informed us, unequivocally, in writing, that "The United States Government does not recognize the purported blockade of Chinese ports by the Nationalist Government of China."

The Secretary of State also informed us that he had, on June 25, 1949, filed official United States Protest against the purported and announced blockade, or port-closure order, on the ground that it was "unlawful under international law" and invalid, and would not be recognized by the United States.

WHEN, THEREFORE, OUR CARGO LINERS HAVE BEEN CARELESSLY CALLED "BLOCKADE RUNNERS" OR "BLOCKADE RUNNING", THOSE STATEMENTS HAVE, OF COURSE, BEEN ENTIRELY ERRONEOUS. A BLOCKADE RUNNER IS A VESSEL GOING THROUGH A RECOGNIZED BLOCKADE WITH CONTRABAND, AND SUCH A SHIP IS DEFINITELY SUBJECT TO SEIZURE.

5 Despite our Government's public pronouncement of non-recognition of this purported "blockade," when vessels of our Company, acting in conformity with our Government's policy, elected to exercise their right of free and unmolested entry into Chinese ports, they were set upon and attacked by Chinese gunboats attempting to enforce an illegal blockade. Our State Department took no effective action to see that these attacks were not repeated.

Our vessel "Flying Independent", followed by our "Flying Clipper", entered the Yangtze River September 18th after exchanging signals of recognition with a Nationalist gunboat at a point approximately 21 miles outside the Chinese territorial line. After having transacted their usual routine in Shanghai, and upon leaving, the vessels were detained outside the Yangtze (while on the high seas) under threat of being fired upon. After a "hold-up" of several days, they were "released" and proceeded on their routes. Our steamer "Flying Cloud" likewise entered the port of Shanghai on October 30th, but was fired upon without warning when leaving. The "Sir John Franklin" was fired at, without warning, before entering the port of Shanghai on November 29th, but left the Yangtze without incident. The "Flying Arrow" was fired on before entering, on January 9th, 1950, while still some 20 miles at sea. The attacks all took place outside the territorial waters of China.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT PROTESTED THE SHELLING OF THE "FLYING CLOUD" AND OF THE "SIR JOHN FRANKLIN" BUT IT HAS NOT ADVISED US THAT IT HAS PROTESTED THE MORE RECENT "FLYING ARROW" SHELLING. NEWSPAPER DISPATCHES FROM CHINA SAY THEY HAVE NOT SEEN ANYTHING IN THE NATURE OF A PROTEST THERE. FURTHER, THE DEPARTMENT DID NOTHING WHEN THEIR OFFICIAL PROTESTS WERE BRUSHED ASIDE. OUR GOVERNMENT'S PROTESTS WERE MERELY REJECTED—PERIOD!

6 The United States Navy has standing instructions to protect United States merchant shipping. Article 0320 of United States Navy Regulations, presently in force, reads:

"So far as lies within his power, acting in conformity with international law and treaty obligations, the Senior Officer Present shall protect all commercial vessels and aircraft of the United States in their lawful occupations, and shall advance the commercial interests of this Country."

Quoting from a legal expression by a high-ranking Navy officer:

"The Secretary of the Navy, in refusing to order the Navy to protect Isbrandtsen vessels and thereby permitting them to suffer damage, is arbitrarily, willfully and negligently disobeying the statutory terms of the National Security Act of 1947."

We asked the United States Navy to protect our vessels in their lawful pursuits, as was their duty, but they did not do so. Our representative in China, retired United States Navy Captain Andrew Crinkley, also requested that protection. Our Masters sent out calls for it, but it was not forthcoming. The excuse could not be offered that Naval ships were not in the vicinity, for our Navy is maintaining a substantial fleet around and in those waters. Two United States destroyers finally arrived after the shelling of the "Flying Arrow" had taken place, and while at anchor licking her wounds from the shelling. The British warship, "Black Swan," had already then assisted her by helping to put out the fire which had broken out in Number 5 Hold as a result of the attack upon her. We have expressed our appreciation to the British Admiralty for its readiness to step in and assist us.

7 The Secretary of the United States Navy, Francis P. Matthews, followed the directions of Secretary of State Acheson in not going to the aid of our vessels, but existing regulations do not leave it to his discretion whether or not the Navy will protect United States merchant vessels, and, what is more, Secretary of State Acheson has no authority whatsoever to direct Secretary Matthews in purely Naval matters. Congress has explicitly defined the duties of each of these men and they did not carry out those duties. After five ships of our Company had been progressively molested, the Secretary of the Navy was finally forced into action and sent the two destroyers to the scene, but only after the shooting was over and our men had been subjected to gunfire.

8 Our State Department, by publicly commenting upon the WISDOM and JUDGMENT of steamship lines staying away from Shanghai, actually encouraged the Nationalists to believe they could carry on any way they wanted, lawlessly or otherwise, and they did so, first stopping our vessels and then, after getting away with that, getting bolder and shelling them and, on top of that, with equipment and ammunition that the State Department had furnished them! Our men were aghast and enraged at the audacity of these supposed friends.

The United States Government runs a steamship line—the American Presidents Line—to Communist-held ports in northern China in competition with our Line, which regularly goes to southern Chinese ports. The State Department is careful not to tell the public that! For, what's the difference, after all, between American ships trading with north or south China in so far as American policy is concerned? The State Department misleads the public in giving out to the press only half-truths, to cover up its shortcomings in handling the situation. The State Department apparently thinks that all it has to do to by-pass its duties, is to issue some "warnings."

9 New York City does not maintain a police force for the purpose of warning its citizens against thugs. The police are there to put thugs behind bars and do just that.

The men on our unarmed American merchant ships when going about their legitimate business and livelihood want, and are entitled to, protection—not warnings. As it has worked out, it must appear that the State Department actually encouraged the molestation of our vessels—for had that not been so, they could easily have put a stop to it.

10 At no time throughout the years have we considered our sailings to China or elsewhere as indicating approval, or disapproval, or support of any of the different governments, or governmental factions or parties which have been in or out of power there. We have for years operated as public carriers, as we should, endeavoring at all times to furnish efficient transportation at reasonable and competitive freight rates. WE CARRY NO MILITARY SUPPLIES OR MUNITIONS. We have at all times acted in accord with the laws of the United States, and international law related to shipping on the high seas. We have been a party to no shipping cartels; have requested no subsidies from the American taxpayers; and have asked the intervention of our Government in only those instances where our lawful operations have brought us into conflict with foreign governments which, at times, contrary to international law, have acted to infringe upon our rights as American citizens.

With the Bible, a Constitution such as we have, and plenty of elbow grease, no one needs to lean on anyone else in this great land of ours.

Now, as to this communist angle, which we hear so much about:

The United States trades with the U.S.S.R. (Soviet Russia), and American vessels, subsidized by the United States Government, freely trade with Russia's Baltic ports and Russia's Black Sea ports.

The United States trades with Poland, and American vessels, subsidized by the United States Government, freely trade with Poland.

The same applies to Russian ports in East Asia, both Vladivostok and to ports in Russian-controlled Korea.

The United States Government does not recognize Spain politically, but it subsidizes American vessels trading with Spain.

Argentina's government is not on our Country's political preferred list, but United States subsidized vessels are trading there daily. We have no quarrel with this, except that we ourselves are not subsidy minded.

Let's go further: We are now building up our late adversaries, Germany, Japan and Italy, and seeing to it that all these countries are getting into Foreign Commerce and merchant shipping in a substantial way—it is probably true to say, in all cases, with funds, material and equipment supplied by this Country.

We are workmen ourselves—and we are in sympathy with everyone else working at the job he is best suited for, but for us in this country to give away gunboats and ammunition for the other fellow to turn on us—is just too assinine to even talk about. An impossible situation is fast approaching for the American taxpayer as a result of what has been going on and is still going on with some of these unwise and unnatural "deals" abroad made by some of our impractical people. Unfortunately, our Foreign Commerce, like green pastures will be devoured by a swarm of locusts before it can be saved.

11 Now let us go back to China: To single out these traditionally friendly people is, we think, unjust to them and unjust to ourselves, for China has always been friendly to the United States and we to them. Its people, with the oldest civilization of all, have passed through untold sufferings by exploitation by their own and foreign masters. We think it is quite possible, with a little effort, that its millions and millions could be made very unfriendly to us. By cutting off our trade with them and making it difficult for them to do business with us is one way of doing it. We should be the last ones to add to their troubles in our own interests as well as theirs.

The Secretary of State had this to say the other day:

"A survey of the conditions in Asia has led to the conclusion that a new day has dawned. It is a day in which the Asian peoples are on their own and know it and intend to continue on their own. It is a day in which the old relationships between East and West are gone. That relationship is over and the relationship of East and West must now be in the Far East one of mutual respect and mutual helpfulness."

If this is not "double talk" we have never seen or heard "double talk." The Department chastises us for having the courage of its own convictions!

12 Nearly half of the world now seems to be of a mind to do things differently politically than we do here, or at least as we profess to do them here, for certainly in many respects it is just a case of who's kidding whom, and what with all these subsidies and creeping socialism we witness here daily. However, if we should be foolish enough to do without that half of the world commercially and decline to do business with them, while the British Imperium is taking on nearly all of the other half, as it seems to be doing, what with its sterling arrangements and realistic know-how, then we who live here might just as well not bother ourselves further with Foreign Commerce problems for there won't be any Foreign Commerce to worry about. That leaves us to scatter over our still sparsely populated plains as best we might, and the expenses of the State Department and the Navy can be dispensed with.

Many people in responsible positions in this Country go about these Foreign Commerce matters as if we in the United States were the only pebbles on the beach. That goes for the planners, the dreamers, the schemers and the political promoters who have never met a payroll themselves, not even their own, and who talk about sordid profits but never about sordid taxes on those profits, which are used to foot the bills for their own pay and for all their theories and abstracts. However, those of us actually engaged in producing goods, freighting them and coming to grips with the actualities of world competition, know only too well that we here in the United States are not the only pebbles on the beach. It is high time we woke up—our foreign competition is making capital of our continual mistakes in handing out our nation's resources and giving away our markets. Foreign Commerce is not, as apparently some of our officials believe, something that can be turned on and off like a water faucet whenever we choose. It never occurs to these officials that our customers may turn us off. We have already seen unmistakable signs that this might very well occur insofar as the new China is concerned if we show any uncertainty as to whether or not we want to deal with them.

The best way to reduce or take off political tension is by legitimate, international mutual commerce, because that brings the world's peoples together.

13 This whole thing, is of course, not one firm's problem alone—it is the concern of every American citizen whether he recognizes it as such or not—every automobile mechanic in Detroit, every farmer, North, South, East and West—every manufacturer, every working man and every industrious man or woman in constructive enterprise or profession—all have a stake in it, some more than others to be sure—but all are and will be directly affected by whatever is done in the Orient to deprive us of free access to the foreign markets and the necessary protection to get there. We must profitably dispose of our crops and of our surplus materials and manufactured goods must bring in the raw materials that we don't have ourselves. That is Foreign Commerce—and the continuation of our whole way of life depends on it whether we realize it or not.

We took a shellacking in China while insisting upon doing our part. We were and are unwilling to surrender something which undoubtedly cannot be easily recovered once it is lost.

THIS IS THE FIRST TIME IN OUR COUNTRY'S HISTORY WHERE UNARMED AMERICAN MERCHANT VESSELS ON THEIR LEGITIMATE VOYAGES HAVE BEEN FIRED UPON TREACHEROUSLY, DELIBERATELY AND WITH IMPUNITY AND WITH NO APPARENT CAPACITY FOR INDIGNATION ON THE PART OF OUR ADMINISTRATION.

So, we have petitioned Congress under Amendment One of the Constitution to set things to rights. When the smoke clears away, we expect to be back on the true course again in line with past American traditions.

Treasury to Hire 5000 New Employes If Budget Is Approved by Congress

Treasury will hire more than 5000 new employes during this year if Congress approves its budget requests.

Secretary John Snyder informed the House Appropriations Committee that his department had 86,284 employes as of January 1. He estimated the number would be 91,939 at the end of this year, a probable increase of 5655.

The Secretary gave the committee a table, breaking down the proposed changes in his department. The principal ones were: Internal Revenue, to increase from 54,495 to 59,358; Bureau of Engraving and Printing, an increase from 5964 to 6200; Customs Bureau, to increase from 7867 to 7965; Coast Guard (civilian employes) a boost from 1146 to 1209; and Treasurer's Office, from 1416 to 1490.

ECONOMY: Snyder told the committee that the management improvement program in the Internal Revenue Bureau had saved more than a million man hours of work. That's the equivalent of more than 500 full-time employes, an impressive record.

The Secretary asked for 11 million dollars to hire 2956 additional enforcement people for Internal Revenue. A recent check, he said, showed that mistakes in computing taxes are made in one of every four tax returns, and most of the errors are in favor of the taxpayer. A closer check would be made on all tax returns if the increase is allowed.

PROGRESS: Snyder said he regularly received from 15 to 20 letters a week complaining about the Customs Bureau when he became Treasury Secretary. He cooperated with the House Appropriations Committee and reorganized the agency. Now, he reported, I get from 5 to 10 letters a week complimenting customs.

NARCOTICS: Both the Secretary and the committee members were enthusiastic in their praise of Harry J. Anslinger and his narcotic staff. Snyder told how he had tried to give a gold medal to a narcotic enforcement officer for breaking a tough case, but the man told him: "You must not do it. I would be finished in the department." But the Secretary said he gave it to him anyway, but promised to keep his identity a secret.

JOBS: Civil Service today will accept applications for these jobs: auto mechanic, $2450 to $3400 a year to start; glassblower, $2650 to $3825, and operating engineer, $2450 to $5400. The tests will be closed on February 9.

POSTAL LONGEVITY: Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), chairman of the postal subcommittee of the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, is having a bill drafted to give ALL postal employes credit for ALL postal service toward longevity promotions.

The AFL is reported to have thrown its powerful support behind Assistant Secretary "Jebbie" Davidson for promotion to Interior Undersecretary . . . AFL's National Federation of Postoffice Clerks has condemned as "anti-labor and completely destructive of the morale of postal employes" the Postoffice Department order which allows low-paid mail handlers to take over jobs of higher paid employes during emergencies . . . A new Government promotion policy will be debated tonight at a meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration in the Archives Auditorium. Among the participants will be Charles Stern of Public Housing; James S. Dawson of Agriculture; W. S. Andrews of Navy; Glenn Stahl of Federal Security; Don Harvey of CAA, and Harold Leich of Civil Service.

CLARENCE M. DINKINS, a Washington attorney, is in the running again for appointment to the Federal Trade vacancy. He's a former FTC lawyer. . . . The recent wire-tapping charges have made a score of top Federal officials believe their phones are tapped. Many private investigations are underway to determine if their suspicions are true. . . . In a weekend radio program, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) was asked where economies could be made in Government. Among his suggestions were a reduction in the "excessive" holiday leave given Federal workers.

Sen. Johnson To Push Bill For Another Airport Here

Will Call Hearings After Meeting With CAA Head; Would Keep Military Fields

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) last night disclosed plans to "vigorously push" his bill authorizing another "first-class" civilian airport here to relieve congestion at National Airport.

At the same time, he said he "didn't think much" of the Board of Trade's recent proposal that all flight activities at Bolling Field and Anacostia Naval Air Station be eliminated.

"The military ought to have these airports," said the chairman of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, which handles civilian aviation legislation.

To See CAA Head

Johnson said he will meet February 2 in his Capitol Hill office with Delos W. Rentzel, administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, "to go over the whole Washington airport situation," preliminary to calling hearings on his bill.

"I am convinced that another first-class civilian airport for passenger liners in the Washington area is the best answer," said Johnson, "and I particularly want to know what steps, if any, the CAA has taken to acquire options on possible sites." He emphasized his intention of pushing for prompt action on his measure.

Should Congress pass his legislation, Johnson visualizes the new airport—"free from fog and outside the congested air traffic area"—as one that would serve passenger airliners, cabinet officers' private planes and some private flying.

Freight to National

The present National Airport then would probably be restricted almost exclusively to air freight carriers and other commercial planes, Johnson commented.

"No passenger airlines would want to come into National," he added, "if we get this new airport."

A CAA spokesman said his agency has concluded that the traffic potential expected here during the next five years will demand another airport.

CAA has completed two "cursory" airport site surveys and came up with five tentative locations, two in nearby Maryland and three in Virginia, the official said.

But CAA is withholding definite site recommendations and outright indorsement of the Johnson bill pending the Bureau of the Budget's decision on the measure. The Budget Bureau is expected to act within the next few days.

Overflow to Baltimore?

One informed Government aviation official raised the possibility that the Budget Bureau, in the interest of economy, might propose that National Airport overflow go to the nearly completed Friendship terminal, near Baltimore, or to Andrews Field.

The Board of Trade and other local interests, which want a new airport here, oppose sending the overflow to Baltimore.

2 Convicted In Shooting Lose Appeal

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a ruling that two men convicted in a local shooting had legally waived trial by jury.

The men are John J. Bruno, 38, and James T. Skeens, 28, both of Baltimore, who were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying an unlicensed pistol. The assault involved a shooting on 8th st. nw. growing out of a roving crap game.

The pair, represented by an attorney, appeared in District Court last April and waived a jury trial. After conviction and sentence, they obtained another lawyer who moved to vacate the sentences on grounds the trial waiver was not valid. Sentences were 16 months to four years for Skeens and 18 months for Bruno.

Yesterday the appeals court found there was substantial proof of a legal waiver.

Citizens Group Assails Transit Fare Increase

The Shipley Terrace Citizens Association, in far Southeast Washington, last night determined to fight any transit fare increase "until such time as adequate basic transportation facilities are provided" in the community.

In a stinging resolution, the group charged that the Capital Transit Co. had failed to provide such facilities to the 4000 Shipley Terrace residents "after long and repeated requests and appeals."

This failure, the resolution stated, "can only be interpreted as a general company policy of 'the public be damned'."

Hitherto, the motion read, the association had not opposed reasonable fare increases or other means of raising revenue such as radio commercials, believing the added revenue would bring better service to Shipley Terrace.

In another resolution adopted at the meeting at 2603 Southern ave. se., the association joined a number of other civic groups in asking that sale of Federal property be publicly advertised in advance of sale.

Georgetown Association

The movement to preserve old Georgetown buildings won the backing of the Georgetown Citizens Association last night.

Meeting at St. John's Parish Hall, the group of about 60 persons voted to ask the District Commissioners to indorse a bill for the preservation of the pre-1850 building exteriors which is now pending in Congress.

The association acted after a speech in favor of the bill by Horace W. Peaslee, chairman of the committee on the National Capital of the American Institute of Architects.

The association also voted to back a Senate-passed bill calling for the reorganization of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; and in another resolution favored the removal of the new parking ban.

Society of Natives

John W. Tramburg, director of the District Board of Public Welfare, last night outlined the proposed expenditures of the board under the new budget to members of the Society of Natives at the Mayflower Hotel.

The group, headed by Herbert P. Leeman, who is also president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, drafted a resolution recommending the return of the 60-40 plan for the city budget.

Oldest Inhabitants, Inc.

Celebrating Fire Department night, the Oldest Inhabitants, Inc., last night honored one active and four retired firemen with a total of 174 years' service.

Guests were Capt. Joseph A. Briscoe of No. 4 engine company, and Captains J. G. B. Key and Charles Gibson, Lieut. John W. Stevenson and Pvt. Frank Hall, all retired. It was voted to ask that the South Capital Street Bridge be named after Benjamin Banneker.

Washington's winter still holds aloof. Forecast for today by the Weather Bureau is "cloudy and continued mild," which is no change. Low anticipated early today is about 48; high, 56.

The high yesterday was 63 at 3:20 p. m., no record for January 23. It was 71 degrees on that date in 1874 and again in 1906. The low yesterday was 43 at 7:08 a. m.

Dorothy F. Alderman, promoted to lieutenant and shifted from the sex squad to a supervisory post in the women's bureau.

John O. Curtis, promoted to lieutenant and transferred from the general assignment squad to the lieutenant's desk in the detective bureau to replace Lieut. Mike Mahaney, recently named head of the new safe squad.

William R. Shelton, juvenile bureau, and Patrick A. Deenihan, robbery squad, promoted to detective sergeant.

Lionel Couture, homicide squad, and Arthur H. Molle, robbery squad, promoted to precinct detective.

J. J. Wolfe, automobile squad, and Joseph Y. Chennault, missing persons bureau, promoted to probationary detective.

At the same time, police officials announced that Lieut. George E. Cooper, recently of the Twelfth Precinct who had been assigned to the robbery squad 18 days ago, has been shifted to the general assignment squad.

Party, D. C. At Odds on PUC Choice

Democratic Group Supports Boisvert; Quinter Nominated By Commissioners

Open competition for the District Public Utilities Commission vacancy last night loomed as Round Two of the tiff between the Commissioners and the local Democratic organization.

The city heads, asked for recommendations by the White House, have offered Ralph D. Quinter, jr., 35, career member of the Corporation Counsel's Office, as their candidate, an informed source said yesterday.

The other aspirant, officially in the race for the $9706 job is Harold V. Boisvert, 32, law professor at National University. He has the backing of the Democratic Central Committee.

Boisvert

Quinter

Appeals to Chairman

Boisvert, former president of the District Young Democrats and former secretary of the Democratic Central Committee, has taken his case to William J. Boyle, jr., Democratic National Committee chairman.

Donald Dawson, White House aide, last night confirmed that the Commissioners presented a candidate at his request.

The first recent appointment tangle between the city fathers and local Democratic chieftains occurred last summer when Commissioner John Russell Young was up for reappointment. Then the Democratic organization was unsuccessful in putting across its candidate, the late Thomas P. Morgan, jr.

Baker a Candidate

Another candidate for the PUC post is Vernon A. Baker, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations' public utilities committee. Baker has been leading the fight for court action against the PUC's recent rate boost granted the Washington Gas Light Co.

Greenbelt Acts To Buy Utilities From U. S.

The Greenbelt City Council last night directed its attorney to begin negotiations to acquire the city's public utilities now owned by the Federal Government.

Operation of the utilities was suggested as a means of raising additional revenue for the city. City Manager Charles T. McDonald pointed out, however, that only the operation of the electric system would benefit the town coffers and suggested that water and sewage facilities continue to be handled by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

Electricity is purchased by the Government from the Potomac Electric Power Co., and retailed to Greenbelt consumers. Water and sewage disposal contracts are held by the WSSC.

A personal-property tax levied for the first time in 1949 on utilities, corporations and financial institutions within the city was repealed when it was pointed out to the council that the Greenbelt Consumer Services, a cooperative, would be required to pay $7100 and all the other affected institutions combined, less than $100.

Former council members declared when the authority to levy the tax was granted the council it was not the intention to tax GCS.

Road Fund Allocations To Be Studied

A survey of the Maryland State Roads Commission procedure in allocation of funds to counties for road improvements and construction was promised last night.

State Senator Roy Tasco Davis pledged the Montgomery County legislative delegation to undertake such a study.

Davis and other members of the delegation, all Republicans, attended a meeting of the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring.

Several citizens asked what the delegation could do to influence the commission to widen and straighten Old Bladensburg rd., which was termed "a death trap." The questioners said the Allied Civic Group had been told by the commission that it did not have the funds to undertake the project.

Delegate Dewitt Hyde said this meant the commission had already allocated its funds for Montgomery County, not that it did not have funds on hand.

Davis also declared he is preparing legislation to strengthen Maryland's sex laws. Delegate Anders R. Lofstrandt, jr., briefly outline 34 bills prepared by an interim committee for introduction to the legislature when it convenes in February.

Frederick P. Lee, president of the county council, told the meeting the council has requested two bills of the legislature. One would eliminate mandatory referendums on all bond issues. The other would permit arbitrary purchase and use of land for road rights of way during condemnation proceedings which would set the final purchase price.

Corporation Tax Rescinded In Takoma

The Takoma Park City Council last night rescinded the personal property tax on all corporations which it voted to impose last week for the first time in the city's history.

The action was taken in an executive session shortly before a public meeting in which representatives of 25 corporations were present to protest the new tax.

Much opposition has been voiced during the past week by the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce, and resolutions condemning the tax were sent to the Council.

The council was not unanimous. Two of the seven council members, Ross Beville and Walter McClenon, voted to retain the tax.

The council tabled for the third successive time the question of holding a referendum on a new bond issue of $200,000 or more for construction of a city hall because it could not agree whether this project should have precedence over two other projects, widening of streets and establishment of off-street parking areas.

Councilman Herman Heffner, 78, a council member for the past 16 years, was honored during the meeting by Takoma Park Post 350, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Post Commander Albert Brown presented Heffner with a medal.

In other actions, council adopted an ordinance setting a city caucus for March 14, at 8 p. m., city fire house, for nominations of candidates for mayor and city council for election March 28, and voted to pay Justice of the Peace Luke Bennett, jr., $25 a month for handling city warrants.

Alexandrian Is Slain by Sweetheart In Chicago

'I Love You,' He Cries As Divorcee Fires Gun; Broken Date Precedes Tragedy

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 23. (Spl.) As he shouted a warning and protest of his love for her, an Alexandria, Va., man was shot and killed early today by his 40-year-old divorcee sweetheart.

Police said she told them the shooting resulted from a quarrel that arose when he failed to appear to keep a dinner date and she subsequently found him in a drinking spot.

Victim was Jack A. Evans, 30, a former A. B. & W., bus driver, who lived at 15 W. Del Ray ave., Alexandria. His gun-wielding sweetheart, in whose arms he died, is Mrs. Rosalie Lynch, 40, who works as an office manager and lives in a hotel apartment with her two children.

She Went Looking For Him

In recent months Evans has operated gasoline tanker trucks from Chicago to points in the Middle West.

Police Sergt. James McMahon said Mrs. Lynch told him Evans failed to appear for a dinner date, last night, and she "decided to go out and look for him."

After she found him in the drinking spot, she said, the pair quarreled for a time, then "settled down to some drinking" for several hours.

On returning to her apartment, shortly after midnight, she told police, the quarrel was resumed.

She said she took an automatic pistol from her dresser, loaded it while Evans watched, then pointed it at him.

"It's Liable To Go Off"

"Be careful with that thing, it's liable to go off," she said he told her. "Don't be a fool, Rose, I still love you!"

Then after calling him a "damn liar," Mrs. Lynch said, she accidentally discharged the gun. The bullet plowed through his left chest, and he died almost instantly as she held him, she said. Then, she summoned help and police. She was held without charge pending further questioning.

Friends said Evans saw service in the past World War with infantry ski troops in Italy, Germany, and France.

Evans is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lottie Evans, and a brother, Edward A. Evans, with whom he formerly lived at the Del Ray ave. address in Alexandria, and a sister, Mrs. Nancy Wolford, 2800 River rd., Alexandria. A native of that city, he was divorced about four years ago, and then left his employment with the bus company and went to Chicago.

Man Frees Girl's Arm From Store Dish Conveyor

A girl supervisor for the F. W. Woolworth Co., 3208 14th st. nw., was pulled from a dish conveyor dumbwaiter last night by a store patron who freed her mangled arm from the conveyor as it drew her into the opening.

The unidentified rescuer leaped across the counter to free the left arm of Lynn Rogers, 22, of 1113 Massachusetts ave. nw., which was caught in the continuous belt conveyor that carries dishes from the main floor to the basement.

He applied a tourniquet to her arm, spectators said. The supervisor was admitted to Emergency Hospital and treated for severe lacerations.

Citizens Hit D. C. Government's Slow Action

The Washington Post

BURTON | McLAUGHLIN | THOMAS
From Junior Chamber, Connecticut ave. and National Gateway groups

figures up or down, indicated belief there will be some trimming of requests for new personnel. The budget proposes 641 more city jobs; with the biggest increase, 146 men, to cut the Fire Department from a 6-day to a 5-day week.

The subcommittee also heard:

1. A flurry of dispute over operation of the District National Guard. Col. Charles M. Myers, USA retired, Army instructor for the District Guard from 1946 to 1949, protested having the District take over payment of the salary of the adjutant general, and also the assignment of a full-time commanding general. He told reporters the Guard "has been taken away from the citizens of Washington and given to the National Guard Association. It shows what happens when you don't have the vote."

In reply, Lieut. Col. Robert F. Cocklin, chief of staff of the District Guard, told the subcommittee that in the middle of last year, Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth was assigned as commander of the District Guard on a full-time basis so "our affairs could be properly administered." He said the operations under the previous system, with part-time commander, and full-time adjutant general, were unsatisfactory.

2. Henry D. Hamilton, of the National Capital Area Hospital Council, urged an increase in the rate of District payments to private hospitals for their care of indigent patients. As the budget is now set up, the District is seeking to pay about $700,000 for services that would cost nearly $250,000 more than that if given by Gallinger Municipal Hospital, and that actually cost the hospitals some $450,000 more than the budgeted allowance.

3. Jerome B. McKee, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, urged that Congress abolish the District's unincorporated business tax, its personal income tax and its personal property tax, cut the real estate tax from $2.15 to $2 per $100, and increase the Federal payment from 12 to 17 million dollars a year. He also said the budget should be cut from 119 to 115 million dollars. McKee also, in response to a question by Representative Foster Furcolo (D., Mass.), declared his group opposes home rule for Washington.

4. Jo V. Morgan, speaking for the District Bar Association, said Washington taxpayers can win appeals for District refunds in the Supreme Court—and still collect nothing. The reason, he said, is a statutory time limit—no refunds can be paid out after three years have elapsed from the time the tax was paid. He asked doing away with the time limit.

5. Requests for adding some $39,000 to the budget so that driver training programs can be set up in all the District high schools—they are now given only in four vocational schools—were presented by Washington I. Cleveland of the District Division, American Automobile Association; Charles H. Burton of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Harry L. Meader, District Federation of Women's Clubs.

The drive for additional school building funds for east Washington areas produced these highlights:

1. 3. Mrs. Annie Stein of the Southeast Club of the Progressive Party, and Mrs. Florence Orbach, of the United Public Workers Auxiliary in the far Southeast section, both appealed for an end of the dual school system. They said it will save money and solve the parttime schooling problem.

Murder Jury Told Pritchett Threatened to Hunt, Kill King

Fred S. Pritchett, on trial for the murder of Clyde S. King, threatened to "hunt him and kill him," shortly before King was shot to death.

That's what Detective Sergt. Peter Zazanis of the homicide squad was told by King's 9-year-old grandson the day after the shooting, the policeman testified yesterday in District Court.

King, a locomotive engineer, was shot to death in the Eckington yards of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad July 10. Pritchett, who roomed at the King home at 212 Channing st. ne., has denied any knowledge of the crime.

King's grandson, Edward, confronted Pritchett with this statement in the homicide squad room, Zazanis said:

"Pappy hit you in the mouth and knocked you down last night. You said you were going to hunt him and kill him."

Zazanis said that Pritchett then asked the boy: "Butch, couldn't you be mistaken?" The child replied: "No sir. That's what you said," according to Zazanis.

The Government is expected to rest its case today. The trial will resume at 10 a. m.

Bazile Called Unfit To Sit As Judge

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23.—Fredericksburg Delegate William J. Gibson rocked the House of Delegates today with a 17-point statement of charges and two resolutions demanding an investigation of Judge Leon M. Bazile of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit.

After Gibson declared that Bazile does not have the "mental capacity or judicial stability" to hold his job, three delegates from the circuit jumped to the judge's defense.

Judge Bazile made a blanket denial of Gibbon's accusations of misconduct and incompetence in a statement to The Washington Post.

"I consider that the whole thing is without justification," Judge Bazile said. "A lot of it is false, other parts of it are garbled, and I shall be glad to explain any charge made against me in an entirely satisfactory manner before any tribunal that he (Gibson) may wish to haul me."

Gibson told a stunned and attentive House of Delegates that Bazile, who is up for reelection February 1, should be investigated for a number of reasons, among them:

1. He had once been charged, "in a word," with "criminal conspiracy against infants," and had failed to 'meet such an attack upon his integrity and character."

2. He suspended sentence for 25 years against a defendant on condition, among others, the man never have intimate relations with any woman other than his wife.

3. He had been "bitterly condemned" by the clerk of the Circuit Court of Fredericksburg, who stated "on numerous occasions that the judge had no regard for the money or property of litigants in his court, but used it for the purpose of allowing fees."

4. His court "on occasions too numerous to recall" had been described by Ralph M. Whitticar, jr., a member of the Fredericksburg bar, "as the Nut-House."

Judge Bazile, who has been a circuit judge since 1941, had this to say in an interview with The Washington Post about each charge:

1. He can "disprove all charges made in a petition" by Gibson in 1948 to the Supreme Court, asking for a writ of prohibition to keep Bazile from sitting on a case in which a juvenile was charged with housebreaking and which Bazile remanded to the juvenile court after it was presented to him by the grand jury.

2. He put "some very severe conditions" upon a man convicted of statutory rape in suspending sentence for 25 years, with concurrence of the probation officer.

3. "I do not believe there is any truth" in the charge about the clerk of Fredericksburg Circuit Court. "Without any solicitation on my part, he indorsed me for reelection as soon as he learned of Mr. Gibson's attack upon me."

4. "I do not believe there is a word of truth" in the charge that Whitticar called his court "a nut-house," as Gibson charged. Whitticar, who is commissioner of accounts in the city, was among members of the bar who "intervened on my behalf when they learned of the outrageous attack made upon me by Mr. Gibson."

Gibbon's charges came as a complete surprise to the House of Delegates, since he said last week he had abandoned his project to support "another candidate" for the judgeship reportedly his law partner, S. Bernard Coleman. In view of what has transpired, however, Gibson said Coleman would not consider the appointment.

Two Indicted In Abortion, Scheve Deaths

Ralph Willard Myers, 44, yesterday was indicted by the District grand jury in the abortion death of Mrs. Nina Cogar Campbell, 19-year-old mother of two.

The grand jury also returned an indictment against James Abbott Rigsbee, 35, charging him with first-degree murder in the fatal shooting of Joseph H. (Big Joe) Scheve, convicted gambler.

Myers, a window-shade salesman, who lives at 2110 N. Lincoln st., Arlington, was arrested January 5, several hours after Mrs. Campbell of 4800 O st., Hillside, Md., was found dead and severely beaten in the apartment of a Children's Hospital nurse at 1321 Fairmont st. nw.

Rigsbee, whose address was given as 1734 Trinidad ave. ne., signed a confession in which he told police he shot Scheve after the latter threatened hin

Rigsbee also was indicted yesterday on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and robbery.

The assault was on David Silverman, 42, of 1326 Missouri ave. nw., who was struck in the thigh with a stray bullet during the shooting

The robbery charge resulted from a complaint by Charles Lombardi, 41, of 616 Maryland ave. sw., who told police he was slugged by three men, one of them Rigsbee, at 8th and I sts. nw. on December 1. The three men drove him around in a car, took his wallet but returned it when they found it was empty and then pushed him out of the car, he said.

Woman Pleads Guilty After Theft Indictments

Miss Munro, listed as residing at 4331 4th st. sw., was indicted along with Samuel Carter, 21, of 1786 Stanton ter. se., who has yet to be arraigned on the charges.

They are charged with snatching the purses of two women on 17th st. nw., and on Connecticut ave. nw., on December 22. Police arrested Carter and Miss Munro after an alert cab driver apprehended the pair and persuaded them it was futile to attempt to escape, since he had their description and automobile tag number.

2 Quit Seats On Council in Falls Church

Two members of the Falls Church City Council resigned their posts at a council meeting last night, both for personal reasons not connected with city administration.

Mandley T. Rust, third ward, elected last September for a four-year term, said he is going into a new business which will demand his full time. D. Kemper Grille, first ward, said he will move into Fairfax County shortly and be ineligible to serve. He was elected in September for a two-year term.

Resignations Accepted

The council voted "with regret" to accept the resignations. Mayor Albert M. Orme said the vacancies will be filled by the council, probably at its next regular meeting. There are legally nine members at present, but a proposed new city charter now pending before the council would cut the number to 7, all to be elected in 1951.

In another action, the council instructed City Manager Roy F. Dunn and Police Chief Elliott Howe to make a study of possible means of curbing automobile speeding.

School Bond Resolution

The council received from the Board of Education a resolution recommending that $700,000 in school construction and improvement bonds, approved by the voters last June, be sold on the public market, rather than issued to the State Literary Loan Fund. The Board of Education resolution was in answer to a request by the council for an opinion on the method of sale. The council took no action.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Parents Ask How to Fetch Married Daughter Out of Her Morbid Brooding About Faithless Husband; She Is Wasting Away With Hatred

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How can I prove to my daughter that she is harming herself by her hatred of her husband? She sits up nights devising ways to hurt him as he has hurt her. Their marriage is breaking up and although she no longer loves him, she is determined to be revengeful. She is driving herself mad trying to "get even."

To explain a bit, Ada has been married for several years and almost from the start it didn't work. Then she had two children, hoping they would change things; but finally, as usual, another woman entered the picture. I don't think the entire fault lies with her husband, however, because being older and wiser, I feel it takes two to make or break a marriage.

On the other hand, we all agree that her husband is no good, never was, and deserves every bit of bad luck that might come his way; but still we don't think that justifies Ada's attitude. She is losing weight, has no desire to adjust herself to a normal life, and has even lost her religious traits, all because of her animosity toward Cliff.

Minister Talks to Her in Vain

MY HUSBAND and I have talked with her, and have had our minister talk with her, too, trying to make her see that vengeance is eating away at her. We just want her to understand that it is not incumbent on her personally to dole out punishment,—that a higher power takes care of those things.

Now she has agreed to weigh the matter a little, depending upon how you, a disinterested person, feel about all this. Please lend us a hand. She is looking forward to your comment. L. B.

Parents Act Like Job's Comforters

DEAR L. B.: Job's comforters didn't do much for him when they called in a body to point out that he was paying for his own mistakes; and their clumsy performance gives us the term "Job's comforters," meaning those who add to another's distress by heaving criticism at him, when he is emotionally too sunk to help himself.

In respect to Ada it seems to me that you and your husband are Job's comforters, as you rally around to insist how wrong she is, in brooding vengefully about her faithless husband.

As I get the picture, you are acutely anxious about her condition, yet without having compassion upon her bitter distress. And where there is absence of compassion for desperate suffering (especially in the life of one's child) there is certainly absence of love—and this lack at the core of Ada's most significant human relationship is the very root-cause of her compulsive hating nowadays, I think.

When a married pair fall into discord and drift apart, and one retains a desire to hurt the other, it is indicative of strong attachment still persisting but badly expressed in face-saving ways. On the surface it may seem that the vengeful person is projecting hate; but the inner purpose of his (or her) misbehavior is to compel attention and evoke emotional response from the defaulting spouse. The hostile person is fighting fear of being forgotten by the other—or of being remembered only with blank indifference.

Fears All Hearts Are Closed to Her

HOWEVER, that type of fear-fighting in the wake of a setback in mate relations is always indicative of a chronic problem of terrified loneliness of spirit, a panic linked to unconscious belief that all hearts are closed to the person forlorn, and that all shoulders coldly turn at his (or her) approach in search of sympathy, help, love, understanding, acceptance, etc.

That kind of panic always takes root in infancy and early years; and the seed thereof is maternal neglect or chill impatience, accurately sensed by the child as signifying resentment and disdain of its "tiresome" existence. Unconsciously your attitude towards Ada is antipathetic rather than deeply affirmative; and for proof of this, study your summing-up of her marital failure. You denounce her husband outright as a no-account, then piously add, "but still I don't blame him entirely; it takes two to make or break a marriage,"—which is damning her, too, by implication.

Ada is seriously sick for want of love. And the cure for what ails her is to find love-security,—to center herself, as it were, in an atmosphere of unfailing love. Thus my advice for her, and to all of you who want to help, is to read Glenn Clark's autobiography, "A Man's Reach" (Harper & Brothers) and proceed from there to study and practice his techniques of prayer—which open floodgates of love in hearts that never loved before. M. H.

Petti-Kilts Are Coming

Frills Tell the Inside Story of Fashion

By Peggy Preston

PRETTY, frilly lingerie promises to be the favorite for spring, 1950.

When you shop for undergarments in the next few months you'll find that the strictly tailored nylon slip or gown is a rather rare article. In its place will be lingerie that is feminine and gay—colorful and full of whimsy. There will be slips with fetching camisole tops, beribboned and eyelet trimmed; funny little chemises, and petti-kilts, which are petticoats in chemise length and ideal for wear under suits.

At a recent showing of advance lingerie styles for spring which we attended in New York, it was evident that underthings for 1950 will follow the lead of the new fashions. Slips will be shorter and often strapless; colors will range from pastels to deep, rich shades; while polka dots, stripes and floral prints will figure in some of the more novel garments. In the fabric division, pure silks and rayons and fine cottons will give nylon a run for its money. The reason: in the heat of the summer the old traditional materials are cooler and more comfortable to wear.

Suit-Slips Pretty And Practical, Too

MOST attractive of the novelty garments shown were the suit-slips. One in lavender crepe had a lace top in a slightly darker shade. A line of tiny rhinestone buttons began under the small collar and ended at the waist. Another, of white nylon, had a puckered nylon blouse top, featuring a high tight neckline. Both of these, as well as others shown, may be worn with or without a suit jacket, and have the advantage of a blouse that does not ease up at the top of the skirt's waistband.

Petticoats are shorter than last year and are being made in a variety of styles to keep pace with skirt fashions. In the New York show permanently pleated petticoats were recommended for wear with slim skirts. For wear with the short, full evening skirts there were wide-ruffled half slips. Especially pretty was one of nylon marquisette net in dark blue over a taffeta underskirt of a lighter hue.

Camisole tops and petticoats were shown in delicately hued eyelet cottons as well as in rayons. One was featured in black crepe, with a flesh-backed lace bodice. Another was of dotted swiss in a deep rose shade, and still another in bright green and white checked gingham.

If you're interested in seeing what the new spring hats look like, make a date to attend the luncheon-fashion show of the Washington Fashion Group on Thursday at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel.

Dozens of spring bonnets will be shown, and better still, the men and women who created them will be on hand to serve as commentators. Coming down from New York for the event are such well-known designers as Walter Florell, Chanda, Mary Goodfellow, Irene, Mme. Lenesta and Baroness Radvansky.

Presiding at the luncheon will be Mrs. Marion Tolson, regional director of the Fashion Group.

Fashion Forecast:

Navy, Gray Win London's Spring Favor

London, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—It's a gray and navy forecast for spring.

Jo Mattli, Swiss-born London dressmaker, opened Britain's week of spring and summer fashion shows today with a burst of gray and navy suits and dresses.

In his Mayfair salon, Mattli, a newcomer to London's "big ten," displayed a collection of 27 models featuring:

Classical gray suits in flannel with two flannel frogs across both sideseams; the skirt hung 15½ inches from the ground—an inch shorter than last season.

A Bedford cord suit lined throughout with a vivid guardsman red, so the scarlet shows as you walk in the double wrapover skirt.

A caped duveteen suit with a waistcoat of fancy navy and white wool.

Topcoats with coachman collars, so huge they look like miniature capes; outstanding was Mattli's oatmeal and black tweed with three quarter length sleeves.

Two navy dresses with large white collars, one with a deep "V."

For cocktail wear Mattli showed a black silk dress embroidered on the sleeve with jet and fastened with jet buttons. This was modelled by his attractive, dark-haired wife, Olga. Another dress had one shoulder bare.

For summer, it's black again, relieved by big yellow flower embroidery or spray of corn. Or, if you like a bare midriff, a navy and white cotton beach dress, separated by four inches of flesh in the middle.

London designers, unlike Americans, specialized in all clothes, from suits to dinner dresses.

And Mattli's piece de resistance was a dinner dress in black lace with wide, low neckline and a skirt of black grosgain with two front pockets set in flowing panels.

Folks Will Warm Up to New Refrigerators

ONE of the nicest things about the refrigerators of '50 is that there's more space for you to use inside the box. In this model, the door goes all the way to the floor, with a 40 quart-vegetable crisper at the bottom and full-width freezer at the top

By Lucia Brown

THEY'RE better and they're cheaper!

That, in a nutshell, is the good news about 1950 refrigerators, just in case you've been flicking a critical eye at your old, beat-up ice box.

Getting a new one is going to be even more of a pleasure than usual this spring, what with "frost-freedom," full-width freezers, "clear-to-the-floor cold," "super-crispers," and air-cushion door seals.

And the price? Well, it's ranging $5 to $50 cheaper than last year, previews here last week showed. The biggest cuts are on the biggest models, but often you'll note reductions of $10 to $20. And even when price isn't appreciably lower, you'll usually find added features to give you more for your money.

Refrigerators will bring more beauty to your kitchen this year, too. Frigidaire, for instance, is styled by the famous Raymond Loewy. It has sweeping full-length doors and a lustrous ice blue, white and gold interior.

New Design Offers More Storage Space

EXTRA storage and freezing space is made available by its new design. Adjustable and sliding aluminum shelves, two extra-deep "stack up" type hydrators, and full-width plastic chill drawers are features of the 'fifty Frigidaire. Top models have a special plate in the back which keeps moisture constant.

The new Admiral refrigerators have stepped storage space way up. A model with 11-cubic foot capacity will fit where an 8-foot model used to go. All have freezer compartments across their full width. The 11-foot job will take 60 pounds of frozen food in its freezer, 2/3 bushel of fresh foods in its hydrators.

This company's "Dual-temp" models never require de-frosting. They have a dry-cold section for quick-freezing and storing and a moist-cold section, where you don't even have to cover foods. A "sterilamp" keeps bacteria from forming and food odors from mingling.

On the top model of Westinghouse, there's a new "frost-free" device that eliminates the chore of defrosting. Every sixtieth time the door opens, a gadget goes to work automatically to remove what little frost has formed.

This refrigerator also has a "sterilamp" to control bacteria and odors, and a big "freeze-chest" for quick-freezing and storing. Ice cubes can be removed one or all at a time. Two stackable humidrawers hold ¾ bushel.

Built-in Freezer And Chiller Shown

A BUILT-IN home freezer and quick chiller are featured by Philco this year. These extend the full width of the box. The "chiller" is a plastic drawer for cooling beverages, salads, and desserts quickly, storing ice cubes, baked goods and leftovers.

"Down to the floor" refrigeration is achieved in Philco and other refrigertaors by condensing the motor and using what was formerly wasted space just above the floor. A "snack box" is an attractive gadget for holding cheese, spreads and the like in the new Philco and some models have the glass "conservador."

New combination refrigerator-home freezers are starred by General Electric this year. Each section has its own door and own controls. Temperature in the upper compartment is at zero for freezing and storing. The lower compartment, for normal fresh-food storage, has a high humidity which makes it unnecessary to cover foods. A temperature regulating device eliminates the need for defrosting the lower compartment.

Food-storage capacity almost double that of a decade ago is claimed by this year's Kelvinators. It's 1950 models are "cold clear to the floor" and there's a 40-quart sliding crisper in the bottom. Kelvinator's top refrigerator this year is a two-door job, with an 80-pound capacity freezer chest at the top.

VIPs Get the 'A' Treatment At Prospect House When State Dept. Becomes Host

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ONLY place in our country where the United State Government goes in for elegant entertainment is right here in Washington. And recently the small receptions, luncheons and dinners staged at Prospect House, the late James Forrestal's residence, have generated a great deal of good-will amongst foreign friends and neighbors.

As everyone knows, since the President and Mrs. Truman moved into Blair House, facilities have not been sufficient to cater to "must" state entertainment, nor have there been Government quarters adequate to house such visiting VIPs as may come our way.

So the Forrestal house built on Georgetown bluffs overlooking the Potomac, was leased by the Government and Mrs. Victoria Jeanney, for many years responsible for operating Blair House smoothly, was installed.

Mrs. Jeanney runs the large establishment with only two maids, plus the famous Blair House cook, Irish Jane Spillane, who was recaptured from private trade. Outside help, always chosen from the same list, is hired for large parties but every scrap of cooking down to the last canape is prepared on the premises.

No more than 16 or 18 guests are invited to luncheon or dinner. Receptions average from 100 to 150. This summer, however, since Prospect House garden is far larger than the tiny Blair House "back yard," receptions for anywhere from 5 to 800 guests are planned.

Some of Mrs. Forrestal's finer furnishings have been removed, but Government-owned rugs, sofas and chairs have proved adequate supplement. Government gardeners, by the way, are going to replant flower beds surrounding the lawn where Forrestal friends once whacked away at Badminton.

Honor guests to be entertained at Prospect House are chosen by the State Department. Individuals of note whom the State Department deems it well to honor are proposed on arrival in Washington by State Department officials assigned to the areas concerned. Eligibility of these nominees is discussed at a meeting which includes protocol officers.

When a party has been decided upon, the Assistant or the Acting Assistant Secretary of State for the honor guest's area acts as host and, of course, his wife acts as hostess, receiving invitees and introducing them to the star of the occasion.

The whole "works" is handled just like a very grand private party—with engraved invitations, superlative food and liquor and Prospect House literally filled with beautiful flowers. One of the guests' favorite edibles, by the way, is also one of Margaret Truman's gastronomic weaknesses—finger length Brownies a-crunch with miraculously crisp nuts.

Painless Way of Raising Funds

METHODS of raising money for charity are always of interest. Most painless system we've heard of is the Silver Tea. One of these will be given by St. Matthew's Committee for Vire, at the residence of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis on Friday.

At a Silver Tea no admission is charged but contributions are welcomed—and the contributions are put (it's hoped) by each guest in a large silver bowl placed not too unostentatiously near the entrance.

Sponsors of the committee, which will help rebuild schools and hospitals in Vire, a Normandy town destroyed by Allied shell fire, is headed by the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, who have promised to be present. Everyone interested is welcome at the tea.

The Silver Tea idea is being used, incidentally, because both American and French sponsors believe that Marshall Plan aid has been so generous that no charity drive should be planned. The French want to take care of their own poor and the money received for Vire will be used only to help replace such facilities as our Army was forced to destroy.

Society Toasts Duchesses—Charlotte and Wallis

By Marie McNair

A GRAND DUCHESS of royal blood, and an American-born Duchess who caused a King to leave his throne, were headliners in the party picture yesterday.

The 54th birthday anniversary of Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg was reason for round the world celebration yesterday. In Washington the Luxembourg Minister and Mme. le Gallais gave a large and brilliant reception.

The Duke of Windsor and his Duchess arrived yesterday from New York to be guests at the British Embassy and to be honor guests at a dinner for about 20 last night given by the Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks and Lady Franks.

The world's most romantic pair will lunch today with the Duchess' aunt, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, and tonight will attend the dinner to honor Vice President Barkley and his bride. Mr. Barkley's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, will be hosts at the dinner.

In Brown and Gold

IN the walnut paneled drawing room of the Luxembourg Legation there's a portrait of Grand Duchess Charlotte—the proud, shy ruler who sought haven in this country during the war. But few guests saw it yesterday as they followed the line upstairs to greet the hosts, and down again for supper in the dining room.

Mme. le Gallais, who is Venetian by birth, wore a gown of Italian brocade in oyster white and gold with revers faced in brown satin. Facing her on the opposite wall was her portrait by Beran, an aqua blue background highligthing her red gold hair.

It was good to see Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the former Secretary of State, who rarely goes out these days, and to find Capitol Hill well represented by Senator Theodore Green, Mrs. Brien McMahon, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Senator and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney, the Senate's Secretary Leslie Biffle and Mrs. Biffle, Mrs. Tom Connally and Mrs. Millard Tydings.

Diplomats There

MME BONNET, with a swirl of bronze paradise on her hat, was talking with Mrs. Joseph Davies, whose husband is our former Minister to Luxembourg, and who is the only woman in America to wear the House of Orange decoration of the tiny Duchy.

The New Zealand Ambassador and Lady Berendsen were stopped at every step and other popular guests were Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle; Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State, and Mrs. Borden Harriman, who wore a deep blue Jacquard satin.

I saw the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani; Mme. van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador; Mrs. Charles Brannan, Ray Muir of the State Department, and the Charlie Rosses—he's President Truman's press secretary.

Other guests were Mrs. John Steelman, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mrs. Brison Norris and her daughter, Laura Mae, with a cousin, Hazel Tippett; Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik and Mrs. Parker West.

Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley's silver hair was framed with a white bonnet edged in black aigrettes; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney tied her black velvet bonnet banded in gold under her chin, and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, there with Dr. Hornbeck, wore no hat at all.

Mrs. Charles Dewey sat on a fireside bench to watch the throng, and others were Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Corrin Strong, with red velvet hat and scarf to match; Gen. and Mrs. John Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon P. King, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Dormer, Mme. Economou-Gouras and Mrs. William P. MacCracken.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Graves entertained at dinner last evening at their home on Foxhall rd.

About Pressing Flowers

About two years ago, I wrote you for information about pressing flowers. You gave me the telephone number of a lady who offered information if I called her. Unfortunately, I mislaid the number and never phoned her. Can you help me get information on this matter? Do you know of any place which preserves flowers either by making pictures of them or encasing in plastic? S. U.

The reader who offered information before says she'll still be happy to do so. Incidentally, at least seven other people profited by your first query, for they called and received advice from this kind reader. Her telephone number is Taylor 0007.

Neither she nor I know of a place here where you could have flowers pressed, framed or encased professionally. Has anyone else this information?

Recently you printed a question from a woman who was allergic to wool and interested in a substitute blanket. I thought maybe she'd like to know of my experience.

I was hospitalized because of an asthma attack. The doctor discovered I had become allergic to wool. He suggested my getting a rayon blanket (88 percent spun rayon and 12 percent wool) which has since helped solve my problem.

The rayon blanket is equally as warm or warmer and as light in weight as most woolen blankets. The cost is less than a woolen blanket of equal quality. All stores carry it in standard size but I found only one (telephone National 9800) carried it in the 80 by 90 size. I also purchased a seersucker blanket spread on sale at a Connecticut Avenue shop (telephone North 2849) to protect me from any possible contact with the 12 percent wool of this blanket. P. L.

We recently purchased a home that has a basement but no attic. I would like to know if clothes can be safely stored in the basement. I have been told that winter clothes will mildew. I have a chest of drawers that I could put sweaters, etc., away in. S. S.

The answer to this one depends entirely on how good your basement is. Of course, Washington is a humid place and there are plenty of local basements where mold and mildew flourish like the green bay tree.

On the other hand, there are well-built, moisture-tight District basements that would be perfectly safe for storing clothes. Where there are windows letting in ample sunlight, a good basement is often a nice dry place. If you can't tell about yours by looking, how about checking with the former occupants of the house?

If they aren't entirely reassuring, you might look into the matter of dehumidifiers. There are electric ones on the market that will keep a whole room dry. Much cheaper are the chemical dehumidifiers, which work nicely in a small enclosed place such as a closet.

Can you tell me an effective way of mending cracks in plastered walls before painting next time? Is there a liquid that can be used over the plastered surface to prevent showing through the paint? W. C. S.

Cracks can be patched with plaster of Paris, though not in its pure form as this hardens too rapidly to be easily worked. Glue dissolved in the mixing water will slow the time of hardening; so also will vinegar, mixed half and half with the water.

The most convenient material, however, is called patching plaster, which can be bought at a hardware or paint store. This hardens so slowly that there's plenty of time to work it into the cracks.

To patch a crack, first widen it sufficiently so that the plaster will be admitted all the way to the bottom. A knife can be used, and the opening should be made wider at the lath than at the surface so that the plaster will "lock itself in."

Dampen the old plaster along the crack so as to prevent moisture being drawn from the new. Then, with a putty knife or small trowel, force the new plaster into the crack, smooth to within ⅛ inch of the top, and allow to dry. In so doing, it's bound to shrink a little. More plaster is then applied with a putty knife or trowel, leveled with the old wall, and smoothed.

If you use a good, thick oil paint on your wall and the mended crack still shows through, it may be necessary to apply two coats.

I am interested in making costume jewelry from vari-colored imitation stones, but have been unable to find any directions and materials. I see materials and supplies for shell and plastic jewelry advertised, but no colored stones. Can you help me? A. A. S.

There's a firm here on 11th st. nw., that has an excellent stock of these imitation stones, plus the "findings" for making them into jewelry. All you need besides is a toothpick and some cement—and they sell the cement. They also show you how to do the job.

Stones they carry include imitation pearls and moonstones, and rhinestones resembling emeralds, aquamarines, rubies and other precious stones. To call the store, dial NAtional 0959.

My husband is the coffee drinker of this family. What methods work well to prepare one cup of coffee, aside from instant coffee? A. C. B.

There are percolators built for two that will make one cup of coffee quite satisfactorily. There are also two-cup dripolators and filter coffee makers that would do quite nicely in this case. Most well-stocked housewares departments carry several of these small coffee pots.

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit telephone and direct mail replies.

One on the Aisle—

'Iwo Jima' Making 3-Theater Splash

By Richard L. Coe

REPUBLIC PICTURES, which presumably has long rankled under the sobriquet, "the poor man's Metro," is viewing our town with certain satisfaction these days.

Its promising war picture, "Sands of Iwo Jima," nets a three-theater preview tonight and its newest star is now on the Capitol stage, Vaughn Monroe.

"Poor man's Metro, huh?" you can hear them snorting out by the Pacific. "John Wayne, Vaughn Monroe and the United States Marine Corps, poor man's Metro, huh?"

The "Iwo" premiere (though it opened in New York sometime ago, any gold braid evening must be a "premiere" and the heck with the meaning of words) centers tonight on the Warner, but both the Metropolitan and the Ambassador will be having two showings as well.

At the Warner, four players of the Marine Corps story will be taking bows from the stage—John Agar, Adele Mara, Forrest Tucker and Wally Cassell. The Marine Band, the Drum and Bugle Corps, the Quantico Marine Band and the Marine Drill Team will be on hand and invitations have gone out to Cabinet, diplomatic and service circles.

This means that "The Hasty Heart" will have its last Warner showing at 5:20 this afternoon, with the theater reopening at 7:30 for two goes at "Sands of Iwo Jima" at 8:15 and 10:15. The Metropolitan will clear the decks after the 5:30 unspooling of "Back Street," for showings of the Marine film at 8:25 and 10:30, resuming "Back Street" and "Scarlet Street" tomorrow. The Ambassador will show "Iwo" at 8:15 and 10:15.

Since even movie people can be only in one place at one time, the big fireworks must, perforce, be at the Warner.

THAT MONROE MAN finished "Singing Guns" for Republic on schedule last fall, and a good thing, too, because his band, Moonmaids, Moonmen et. al. were booked from the next day for a tour that will keep them traveling till June.

Vaughn, who's this corner's idea of the smartest bandsman in that cutthroat business, had a swell time making that movie in Hollywood. He's not got a doubt in the world that Walter Brennan will be stealing the picture, but doesn't mind in the slightest.

With Vaughn this Capitol Theater week is his wife, as patient a soul as you can imagine. The Monroe daughters are schooling in Boston. Yesterday Mrs. M. was going shopping, didn't have any money, so she did what Mrs. Jones does, asked her husband—but with an added phrase. "Have you, or your managers, got any money?" (Natch!)

Making that "Singing Guns" for Western-wise Republic wasn't exactly a new world for Vaughn. He's a regular horseback rider in most of the cities he visits, though how he gets time for it beats most.

Today, for instance, he's getting ready to record an eight-side album of Victor Herbert tunes. There's Saturday's broadcast to think of and yesterday there was a visit with Eddie Gallaher on WTOP.

And a week from Saturday he'll be playing at the Cornell freshman prom at which a certain copper-tressed young lady, up for her first Cornell prom, will blink her 17-year-old blue eyes at him and tell him her name is Jane.

Vaughan enjoys playing for those college frolics just as he did last Saturday at Georgetown, and all the Janes and Bobs seem to enjoy Vaughn, too.

DONALD OENSLAGER, who has designed the settings for more than 150 New York productions in the past 25 years, has been awarded a grant by the State Department for a three-month series of lectures on stage design at United States-assisted cultural institutes in Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, Mexico and Peru. . . . Professor of scenic design at Yale since 1925, Oenslager is a consultant for the Sesquicentennial Amphitheater here and State Department recognition of him is sure to create much-to-be-desired cultural respect for us in the South American countries.

Belasco Lease Is Studied By ANTA

At a meeting in New York yesterday afternoon of the board of the American National Theater and Academy, the terms of the lease on the Belasco Theater offered by the Public Buildings Administration were described as "most encouraging."

C. Lawton Campbell, chairman of the ANTA board, stated that "the board approves the spirit of the lease, but certain technical points must yet be worked out."

These will be discussed here next week between Walter Liebman, lawyer for ANTA on the Belasco lease, and John Nagle of the real estate section of PBA, a part of General Services Administration.

Campbell also announced that two members of the ANTA board, Clarence Derwent and George Somnes, would come to a meeting to be held here tonight of the Citizens' Committee for Theater in the Nation's Capital at the Willard Hotel.

Derwent is president of Actors' Equity Association and Slomnes is noted as a regional theatrical producer, long associated with enterprises in Colorado and Minnesota.

The two board members are expected to tell the Washington committee, headed by Melvin C. Hildreth, of ANTA's position regarding the prospective lease.

Campbell stressed the concern of the board for Washington's theaterless plight and pointed to ANTA's efforts during the past three years to solve the impasse.

"While we are decidedly encouraged about the lease offered, it must be recognized that there are certain legal wordings which any lawyer must have fully clarified before any definite commitment can be made."

The Belasco lease was, but one item on the full ANTA agenda, most colorful of which was the news that next Sunday night's annual "ANTA Album," a benefit in New York for the organization's administrative funds, is all sold out, with a waiting list for the top-priced pasteboards, even a ticket. $100 C.

Bridges Opens Defense; U. S. Witnesses Hit

San Francisco, Jan. 23 (U.P.).—Attorney James Martin MacInnis opened the defense phase of the Harry Bridges perjury-conspiracy trial today with a promise to explode the Government's presentation of "lies, fabrications and insanity."

Quietly and without his usual verbal fireworks, MacInnis announced he would prove "by weight of evidence" that Bridges never was a Communist, never held a Communist card, paid dues or used the aliases attributed to him by prosecution witnesses.

The CIO longshore chief, his vice president, J. R. Robertson, and strategist Henry Schmidt are charged with conspiracy to commit perjury for swearing at Bridges' 1945 naturalization hearing that he had never been a member of the Communist Party.

"I think there will be no gasps when we say perjury has been committed by the witnesses who appeared for the Government," the attorney said.

The attorney said the defense would not contest the fact that Bridges accepted the aid of the Communist Party in the 1934 San Francisco waterfront strike or that he attended meetings of Communist Party members. But, he said, the defense will prove that Bridges was the only non-Communist present at such meeting.

"Bridges' ideas are quite like President Truman's," he said. "The aims and ideas of the ILWU, the Communist Party and the Democratic Party seem to coincide.

"No one of the three becomes tainted by affiliation with the other."

Bridges faces deportation to his native Australia if convicted and all three men could be sentenced to seven years in prison and fined if found guilty.

Ex-Policeman Held in Assault Is Ruled Sane

Francis E. Dodson, 31, Arlington policeman who is charged with invading a home at gunpoint and attempting to rape a young housewife, has been declared sane by Virginia state psychiatrists.

Arlington County Circuit Court officials said the report on Dodson's mental condition came from Dr. Joseph Blalock, head of Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., where Dodson has been under observation since early November.

Dr. Blalock wrote that Dodson "from our observation," is not insane and has not been insane or psychotic since his admission."

Judge Walter T. McCarthy said Dodson will probably be returned to Arlington some time this week.

However, prospects for an early trial are dim, Dodson's right leg, shattered by a bullet during the housebreaking incident, will require a second operation, doctors at Marion informed the court, and he prefers that it be perfomed in Arlington.

Dodson was indicted for housebreaking and attempted rape in the gunpoint, forced entrance into the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Jack Bartels, at 2810-B S. 16th rd., last September 29.

According to police, Dodson forced Bartels and his wife to disrobe, then locked Bartels in a closet while he made indecent advances to Mrs. Bartels, attractive 33-year-old mother of two daughters.

Dodson was shot in the right leg by a neighbor, Air Force Col. William E. Elder of 2812-A S. 16th rd. as he tried to escape.

Scrap Iron Men End Meeting Here Today

The Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel, Inc., today concludes a three-day convention here with election of officers.

Last night Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission addressed the institute's annual banquet. He spoke on the subject of his recent book, "This I Do Believe."

Earlier, Leon H. Keyserling, acting chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, told a session new products and services must be developed to keep up with the demands of the American economy.

Some 300 scrap dealers are attending the convention at the Statler Hotel. Edward L. Solomon is president, Stanley M. Kaplan, first vice president; C. C. Cohen, second vice president; Ralph E. Ablon, secretary, and Samuel G. Keywell, treasurer.

Woman Dies After Heart Attack at Home

A 38-year-old woman personnel clerk for the Army was found unconscious in her apartment by her roommate yesterday morning and was pronounced dead on arrival at Homeopathic Hospital.

The woman, Mrs. Dorothy T. Graham of 1737 Kilbourne pl. nw., who was employed by the Army at Gravelly Point, died of a ruptured heart caused by degeneration of tissues, according to an autopsy report.

The ambulance which took her to the hospital was called by her roommate, Miss Ethel Manning.

Mrs. Graham is survived by a 14-year-old daughter, Barbara, who lives in Chicago with her father, Maj. Harold Graham, Mrs. Graham's former husband. W. B. Gordon, of Richmond, an uncle of Mrs. Graham, arrived in the city after being notified by police.

Lawyer Plans Appeal in Holober Case

The conviction of Charles Francis Holober for the murder of his wife will be appealed to the Virginia State Court of Appeals, it was announced yesterday.

T. Brooke Howard, defense attorney, said he will ask the Fairfax Circuit Court, where Holober was convicted on January 13, to delay the execution, now scheduled for February 15, pending action on the appeal.

Holober was convicted of shooting his wife and burying her in a shallow grave near a Fairfax nudist camp early last year. He confessed the murder and also confessed burying their 8-month-old daughter alive with the body of her mother. He was not tried on the latter charge.

The entire defense was built around the contention that Holober, who formerly lived here at 1216 Shepherd st. nw., was insane at the time he committed the murder, and was still insane.

Ice-Capades Thrill Crowd At Uline's

By Richard L. Coe
Post Reporter

The "Ice-Capades came back to town with a roar last night at Uline's Arena, where Mrs. Truman headed a distinguished audience for a show worthy of its watchers.

This is the tenth edition of the ice revue which opened at Uline's and it's not overstating the case to say that this one's the best yet. The better old tricks remain, more bedazzlingly costumed than ever by that profligate sequin, Billy Livingston, and there are several new gimmicks.

Last night's opening was extra-special, a benefit for the Washington Wellesley Club's scholarship fund.

Notables who took bows included Mrs. Truman, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Chief Justice Vinson and General Bradley. Between the acts, in costumes of their native lands, children of the embassies of Austria, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, the United Kingdom and some representing the United States held their countries' flags while their national anthems were played.

Spectacle is still the "Ice-Capades" keynote, to which recorded voices and pantomime skating have been added for a Walt Disney production number, "Toy Shop." Bobby Specht is again the male star of the big numbers, with Mary Lou Landreville and Jane Zeiser as his partners.

Sensation of the evening was the "Jungle Jive" number of Olympic champ of '48, Johny Lettengarver. Obviously skaters themselves, solid sections of the arena broke into spontaneous roars for Lettengarver's amazing tricks.

Larry Jackson and Bernie Lynam hold down the top comedy spots, with the programmed Eric Waite evidently indisposed. Forgie and Larson have new moves for their badminton turn and young Alan Konrad has the choicest spot of his still brief career. With Mary Lela Wood he also has a fancy-free "Modern Rhythm" that stops the show early.

Altogether, "Ice-Capades" is a dream of a show and with the weekend completely sold out, you'd better get your tickets today.

Yeggs Steal $302 From Ice Cream Firm

Yeggs who broke into the Fussell Ice Cream Co. plant, 1306 Wisconsin ave. nw., showed proper respect for a small burglar-proof safe.

They left it untouched, although it contained $1500.

But they went to work on a much larger safe, on which the smaller safe rested, ripped off the door and removed $302 in cash.

Ford E. Young, owner of the firm, discovered the robbery yesterday morning.

Spencer Howe, proprietor of the Gameroom, a gift shop at 1538 Connecticut ave. nw., found thieves had entered his store during the night and taken $27 from a cash register.

'This I Remember'

Hopkins Was 'Completely Loyal' to Roosevelt

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

DURING the years leading up to 1940 I came to know quite well a few people who were working with Franklin in the government. Harry Hopkins was one of them, because the appeals for help which poured in during the early years of the depression brought me in close contact with the relief administration. Harry Hopkins threw his whole heart and all of his abilities into organizing relief on a national scale. He was a man whom I not only admired but in whom I came to have a deep sense of trust and confidence.

When his second wife died, Betsy and Jimmy, who had known her better than we, were quick to take his little girl Diana into their home and to do all they could for her. Not long after Barbara Hopkins' death, when Harry's own health began to worry him, I told him I should be glad to do anything I could for Diana. After this she stayed with us more and more often. Harry at first was there only sporadically, but finally at my husband's invitation both he and Diana came to the White House to live.

Later I began to see a new side of Harry which I had never known existed. To seek entertainment and diversion when your life is lonely is not strange; what surprised some of us was the fact that Harry seemed to derive so much genuine pleasure from contact with gay but more or less artificial society. People who could give him luxuries and the kind of parties in which he probably never before had felt the slightest interest became important to him.

Harry Hopkins was not so wise a friend to Franklin as Louis Howe had been, but he was completely loyal and, as I have said before, he did give Franklin a companionship which had been sadly missing since Louis' death.

Brought in Miss LeHand

SOME of the people who worked closely with my husband in the Administration were brought in by Missy LeHand, who was always searching for someone who could help in the way that Louis Howe had. Louis himself brought in Mr. Raymond Moley. Mr. Stanley High and Mr. Thomas Corcoran came later as close advisers. For a time Mr. William C. Bullitt too was given important positions and was frequently consulted.

Looking back on it now, I doubt that any of these men meant a great deal to Franklin. I also think they exploited Missy's friendship, believing her more interested in them personally than in what they could contribute to Franklin's work. In this they were mistaken; Missy was deeply interested in seeing the best possible results from whatever work my husband was doing. Occasionally someone fooled her for a time, but with confidence born of long experience I always waited for enlightenment to come.

I had, of course, known Steve Early and Marvin McIntyre for a long time, for they had been with us on the 1920 campaign trips. Though I was fond of them, I was well aware that many of my equalrights beliefs and many of the things I did in the field of social work caused them grave concern. They were afraid I would hurt my husband politically and socially. I imagine they also thought I was doing many things without Franklin's knowledge and agreement. On occasion they voiced their anxieties on the subject to him and to other people. I would have liked to reassure them, but there was no use in my trying to explain my position, because our basic values were very different. And since I was fond of them, I thought it better to preserve the amenities in our daily contacts.

I made one or two rather fruitless efforts to work with the wives of members of the Cabinet. One attempt I remember very well. From the first I had been interested in housing conditions in the District of Columbia, believing that improved housing is a basic requirement for better living conditions. At one point in the early years I suggested that the ladies of the Cabinet listen to a talk by someone who was an authority on Washington housing and then go with me to see some of the alleys and slums.

We went on our housing trip, but I could see that my companions had no great enthusiasm for any contact with slum conditions. The ladies who drove with me were polite enough to get out of the car and glance, at least fleetingly, at the conditions. Those with Elinor Morgenthau preferred to remain in the car and suggested that she report to them, since "she was accustomed to seeing such conditions."

Take Great Deal of Time

WHEN next we met the ladies reminded me that husbands took a great deal of time and the care of a husband was a wife's most important job. They were busy with the social life of Washington, they said, and did not feel that they could undertake any work of this kind. Furthermore, their husbands would not approve. I had learned my lesson; after this I never made any further effort to work with the wives of the members of the Cabinet on anything but our joint social duties. In this field, which they considered correct, they were most cooperative.

I regret that I was never on close terms with many of the Cabinet wives, but by now I had reached an age when making real friends was becoming more difficult. Then, too, I was also preoccupied with the young people during the early years. Later there were many other demands on my time which, in addition to my own social obligations, made it difficult for me to arrange the everyday contacts that might have drawn us together.

I have never known what it is to be bored. My problem has always been a quite different one—to find time to do the things I want to do. When I was young I read a great deal, but of late my work has largely dictated my reading. As a result many things I would like to read I've had to forgo. Sometimes I think it would be delightful if I could devote a single afternoon or evening to uninterrupted reading for pure pleasure.

In the White House I often walked out in the middle of a movie in order to work on my mail. I always tried to time my return before the end, hoping that my guests would not know I had deserted them. Outside the White House I almost never found time to enjoy a movie, and life is not very different even now. I never have time to listen to the radio, except for news broadcasts morning and evening and now and then a special program.

I always saw a great many people, perhaps more than was necessary or wise. Usually they were people who, for one reason or another, felt I could be helpful to them; rarely were they people I was seeing purely for pleasure. This is not saying I have not had a great deal of pleasure in such contacts or that I have not made some friends outside of official life in Washington. Nevertheless, for me, business and pleasure have almost always been mixed.

Coped With Family Crises

MY equipment for coping with family crises was excellent, for my grandmother's code, which she had instilled in me, paralleled that of actors, who believe "the play must go on." This attitude served me on many occasions when other people might have gone to pieces. Franklin's burdens were already too heavy and, since there was nothing any of us could do to alleviate the problems and situations he had to face politically and in public life, we all did our best to soften any blow of a purely personal nature.

Meanwhile I had to carry on my own work, regardless of anything else. When I first went to Washington I was writing a weekly newspaper column as well as a page for the Woman's Home Companion and a great many articles for other magazines.

When I told my husband I was considering writing a daily column he thought it would be too much to undertake with all the other work I was carrying, but aside from groaning over what he thought would be a terrific job he was entirely agreeable to the project.

Some time later, when he was annoyed with certain columnists, he made a disparaging remark at his press conference about all columnists. One of the reporters was quick to remind him that his wife also was a columnist. Without hesitation, Franklin said: "She is in an entirely different category—she simply writes a daily diary."

In February of 1941 the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg came to stay, and we gave the customary parties in her honor. In that month, too, Harry Hopkins was sent to England to perform liaison duty between Franklin and the British government. Joseph P. Kennedy was about to resign as Minister to the Court of St. James, and a new ambassador had not yet been appointed.

Early in that year Mr. Willkie came to see my husband one day, and the household was very anxious indeed to catch a glimpse of him as he sat waiting in Franklin's study on the second floor of the White House. Suddenly, it seemed, many people had errands that took them down the hall past the study. I would have gone myself, but I never learned of his visit until after he had come and gone! Franklin told me of it later. I always felt that he had a real liking for Mr. Willkie.

Mother Died Sept. 7

FORTUNATELY, Franklin decided to come to Hyde Park for the weekend of September 4, because his mother took a turn for the worse. On September 7 she died. It was a great sorrow to my husband. There had always been a very close bond between these two, even though in recent years Franklin had grown away from her in some ways and often they had not been in sympathy about policies on public affairs.

Franklin's mother had always wanted to die in her own room at Hyde Park and be buried simply in the churchyard. She had asked particularly that the men who had worked for her on the place for many years carry the casket. Her wishes were carefully observed.

After she died we found memos asking us to arrange the room in which Franklin was born just as it had been at that time, moving her furniture out of the room she occupied later back into the old one. We did this, of course. I have always felt that the request showed her belief that sooner or later the house which she loved would be a museum. She fought the idea during her life and kept trying to make me promise that I would live out my life there; nor did she see anything strange in the idea that all my children with their families should live there, too. We never made any promise, though, because—although I felt that Franklin would always want to live there—I was quite sure that if he died before I did I should never want to live in such a big house. And I was realistic enough to know that I could not count on any of the children being willing to give up their homes and live with me.

'Socialism' Foe's ABCs Mean 'All But Comfort'

London, Jan. 23 (U.P.)—F. H. Bridges of the London suburb of Croydon suggested an "ABC of socialist rule" in a letter to today's Daily Mail:

"Austerity, bribery, crisis, direction, extravagance, forms, gloom, housing shortage, inflation, jobs for the boys, killjoys, lies, malnutrition, nationalization, officialdom, permits, queues, restrictions, swinwellisms, taxation and tyranny, unofficial strikes, vulgarity, wage freezing, yes men and Z—the end, I hope."

FAIR EXCHANGE

Katherine S. Miller of 1510 Webster st. nw. forwards a column clipped from the Holyoke (Mass.) Transcript-Telegram which quotes a recent wisecrack from this column.

So I guess it's all right for me to borrow a cute paragraph from the Transcript.

After noting that for the tenth straight year internal revenue men found more illegal liquor in Georgia than in any other State, the item wonders out loud whether this is because Georgia moonshiners are more active than most, or whether they just haven't learned to hide their stills as well as their colleagues in other States.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

G. R. Cooley of 4317 15th st. nw. passes along the story about the midget who enlisted in the Army.

When you ask "How could a midget get into the Army?" the storyteller confides:

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

It's time we did something about hypocritical Congressmen. They pass laws, but pay no attention to them.

Yesterday, for about the tenth time in the past two years, there was a serious accident at 1st and C sts. se., near the House Office Building.

This intersection has two fine stop signs, ignored and obscured by Congressmen who can't walk a block or two, and as a result park where they shouldn't.

You can't see a stop sign with a fat Cadillac parked beside it.

Ken David
410 1st st. se.

Dear Ken:

Every time I run a piece like this, people scoff at me and say: "Don't you know you can't fight City Hall?"

Whether it's a Congressman, an "undercover" car assigned to a public figure who is very much in the limelight, a car driven by somebody with diplomatic immunity, or some similar privileged character, the situation is pretty much the same.

Most people of importance DO obey the laws; a few consider themselves above the law. Or maybe they think they're so important that the Government would fall apart if they spent five minutes walking a block or two from a legal parking place, like the peasants do.

Whatever their attitude, you and I can't force them to obey the laws, and the police are also pretty much at their mercy.

All we can do is keep on publicizing these abuses in the hope that self-discipline and the pressure of public opinion will bring about the desired results.

Bill.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Some excellent advice from the postal magazine, "Post Haste":

"The time to make friends is before you need them."

ACCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

My 13-year-old relative came home from a Boy Scout meeting the other night with the news that he had just heard a lecture on "What to do in case of an accident."

"Sounds interesting," I commented. "Now that you've heard the lecture, tell me what you consider the most important thing to remember about accidents." Replied my pride and joy after a moment of reflection:

"Make sure you're not in 'em."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Coast Crime Probe Bears Fruit

By Drew Pearson

(Ed. note—Another of a series on national crime networks.)

One year ago two Justice Department lawyers, Max Goldschien and Drew O'Keefe, began studying a stack of crime reports three feet high gathered from various cities of the United States of America. Thus, very slowly at first, began the current probe of the Nation's far-flung gambling networks.

Pearson

Actually, the Federal Government cannot investigate gambling. It has the power to investigate narcotics, white slavery, immigration violations and income taxes, but although the public doesn't realize it, these are closely meshed with the great gambling syndicates.

Two powerful officials have tried to block this investigation. One was inside the United States Treasury in Washington, the other high up in the State of California.

Despite this, however, the probe began to bear real fruit when, last week, 16 members of a California narcotics gang were indicted.

Leader of the gang is Joe Sica, and his arrest illustrates how closely organized crime is integrated from coast to coast.

Sica is a New Jersey boy and a part of the original Costello gang, having trained with Willie Moretti, the gambling king of New Jersey. Moretti has been Frankie Costello's No. 1 man in that area.

General Vaughan, the President's military aide, has admitted under oath that one of Costello's partners, Bill Helis, the Golden Greek, contributed through him, Vaughan, to Truman campaigns; while John Maragon has admitted under oath that he worked for another Costello partner, Phil Kastel.

Going to California, with that State's wartime growing pains, Joe Sica became Mickey Cohen's bodyguard, then gradually climbed the ladder of crime until he is now Southern California's No. 1 hoodlum. Like Mickey, he runs a haberdashery shop on Sunset boulevard (under the sovereignty of good-natured Sheriff Gene Biscaluz, rather than the tougher Los Angeles police) and also operates a health club as a blind for a bookie joint and a narcotics center.

Being ambitious, Joe was not satisfied with the sovereignty of Los Angeles alone. Up the rich Central Valley of California are some of the wealthiest farmlands in the world, and an old stamping ground for Sica. Once he served as bodyguard for Joe Cannon, the gambling king of Fresno, while one of his narcotics runners, Alex Berry, was pilot of Cannon's private airplane.

So Joe Sica became narcotics king of the Central Valley. Pine Lake Lodge, just outside Fresno, for a time became headquarters for the mob, with 11 teletype machines bringing in news of the racing world. (Pine Lake Lodge is now purged of the mob and under completely new management.)

Diagonally across from the police station in downtown Fresno, operated Joe Cannon's swank gambling joint, the Plantation Club. Not many of Fresno's overwhelmingly law-abiding citizens connected Cannon with any outside mob, and former Police Chief Ray T. Wallace, when asked why he didn't close the Plantation Club, naively replied that he couldn't get his undercover agents inside it—even though a former policeman was the elevator operator, and even though newsmen had no difficulty gaining access.

Furthermore, not many of Fresno's largely law-abiding citizens realized that the 32 houses of prostitution in the city paid an average of $175 per girl per month to the police, with about $5000 to the powers that be in order even to get started. To take over an old lease on a house of ill fame costs as much as $35,000; so it was cheaper to start a new house for $5000. Meanwhile, cheaper gambling establishments paid at the rate of about $150 a month for police protection.

One gambling house, the Club Alabam, was even owned by Lieut. S. A. Meek of the Fresno police force.

The police chief responsible for keeping order in Fresno at that time was blue-eyed, heavy-set, likable Ray T. Wallace, who received a salary from the city of $450 a month.

Not many people in Fresno took the trouble to investigate Chief Wallace's property holdings, though such investigation can be accomplished merely by looking up the county tax assessor's records. This columnist did look up the records, and was surprised to find that the police chief or his wife owned some 16 ranches or parcels of land totaling 1742 acres.

This does not include three lots in the city of Fresno, two ranches recently sold, a hotel and restaurant on G st., and the "OK Rubber Welders," a tire-recapping establishment that is owned in partnership with Wallace's son.

These were some of the facts confronting courageous Gordon Dunn, the Stanford University athlete, after he found himself elected mayor of Fresno last April. These facts also may have been one reason why he promptly fired Police Chief Wallace and Lieutenant Meek, owner of the Club Alabam, and rebuffed the proposals of his campaign manager, Robert Franklin, to open up the city.
